Commencement Notes - -

More than six hundred nostalgic, enthusiastic alumnae returned for Alumnae Day and the Woman's College campus was a gay place, Saturday, May 25.

REUNIONS

Ten classes held formal reunion luncheons at noon—1901, 1911, 1916, 1918, 1926, 1931, 1936, 1941, 1946, and 1950. Many of these were in the College Dining Hall, but the Class of 1901 with the Old Guard and the Class of 1926 had their luncheons in the private dining rooms of the Home Economics Cafeteria and the Class of 1931 went to the Greensboro Country Club.

BUSINESS MEETING

The Commencement Business Meeting of the Association at the Alumnae House at 2:30 was highlighted by the presence of the new Chancellor, E. K. Graham, who gave the Alumnae a report on the past year and announced changes in personnel and plans for the future of woman's College.

Jane Wharton Sockwell '31 presided at the meeting and at the end of the business session turned the gavel over to the new president, Virginia Sloan Swain '28, who presented the new members of the Alumnae Board.

The Class of 1951 was received into the Association, represented by the Everlasting Officers. Nancy Blanton, president, spoke for the class.

Marjorie Hood, chairman of the Alumnae House Committee, made a brief report on the repairs to the House during the past year and called special attention to the new equipment which is the gift of a generous alumna, which was on display in the green room.

Reunion classes were recognized as were many special guests, including Mrs. E. K. Graham, wife of the new chancellor.

ALUMNAE SUPPER

Four hundred Alumnae and faculty enjoyed the annual buffet supper at the Alumnae House at 6 o'clock Alumnae Day. A large number of special guests shared the occasion. Supper was served on the upstairs balcony, with Sarah (Poole) Cartland '21, catering. Agnes Coxie and the Alumnae Social Committee, assisted by Daisy Chain sophomores, helped with the serving.

The Alumnae House Committee, Marjorie Hood, chairman, was responsible for the flowers in the Alumnae House over the Commencement weekend.

520 DEGREES AWARDED

Five hundred twenty degrees were awarded at Woman's College Monday, May 28, 1951, as follows: Bachelors of Arts, 235; Bachelor of Science in Home Economics, 91; Bachelors of Science in Nursing, 6; Bachelors of Science in Secretarial Administration, 79; Bachelors of Music, 17; Bachelors of Fine Arts, 21; Bachelors of Science in Physical Education, 19; Masters of Arts in Education, 11; Masters of Education, 26; Masters of Science, 7; Masters of Science in Business Education, 2; and Masters of Fine Arts, 6, making a total of 520 graduates.

EVERLASTING OFFICERS 1951

A Letter from the New Alumnae President

VIRGINIA SLOAN SWAIN (Mrs. L. H.) '28, who was elected president of the Woman's College Alumnae Association in May. Mrs. Swain has for several years been family life specialist with the Extension Division at State College, Raleigh, a position which she resigned in July to go back into the teaching field. She will be vocational home economics teacher in Raleigh effective September 1, 1951.

Mrs. Swain's husband, Louis, is professor of English, speech being his specialty, at State College. They have two daughters, Betsy, who is 16, and a senior in high school, and Ginger, 10.

During her college years, Virginia was president of the sophomore class, secretary of the Student Government, chairman of the Freshman Commission, vice-president of the Student Government, and a member of Playlikers, the Y Cabinet, Chemistry Club, and Home Economics Club.

Dear Alumnae:

It was wonderful to see so many of you back for Commencement. It was good to renew friendships and to hear all about your families, your work, and your local alumnae chapters. I guess we all came back home telling our families and our friends about our good time together, and about the pride we felt in our Alma Mater. I am sure we talked about the building program which we had heard so much about.

We were proud of W. C. in our day.—We thought then it was tops—and it was. But as we toured the campus, going from the massive steel framework of the Student Union Building, to the new library and infirmary, on over to the new Home Economics Building, and the two new wings of the science building, and on to the new dormitory and the new gymnasium, we realized that a new era is ahead for the college.

We are proud of these tangible signs of growth, but prouder still of what the expansion stands for. Funds for these buildings would not have been granted if our alumnae had not shown to the State the value of the training which they received at W. C. If we were not good homemakers, capable business and professional women, and responsible leaders in our communities, these buildings would not have been built. They are symbols of the state's faith in us and of its hopes and plans for the future of our college.

It is because of this interest and growth in the college, and the untold possibilities for the years ahead, that I feel particularly conscious of the honor and the responsibility which you have placed upon me. I shall do all within my power to help promote continued growth and interest in our Alumnae Association, and to maintain the fine spirit which now exists.

It is good to know that Jane Sockwell will be close by. She has been a wonderful president, and it gives me courage to know that she will be a member of the Board for the coming year. There are other towers of strength which I shall lean on heavily from time to time. I shall look to Betty Jester and Evon Dean for help, advice and inspiration, and I shall rely on Katherine Taylor and Dr. Graham for guidance all along the way.

And last, but most important, I shall look to all of the alumnae for ideas and suggestions as to what you want done. Your new Board has some plans already under discussion, but we need others. Please write and tell us your ideas for helping our Alma Mater to be of greater service.

Sincerely yours,

Virginia Sloan Swain

(Mrs.) Virginia Sloan Swain,
President.

Administrative Committee Will Direct Home Economics Work

Chancellor Graham has announced the appointment of an Administrative Committee to direct the work in Home Economics pending the selection of a Dean of the School of Home Economics.

Miss Mereb Mossman, professor of Sociology and Dean of Instruction, is chairman of the committee and members are: Professors Pauline Keeney, Bess N. Rosa, Madeline B. Street, and Mabel Swanson.

Miss Margaret Edwards, head of the Home Economics Department, resigned at the end of this past school year.

Miss Alexander Will Be Acting History Head

Miss Louise Alexander, associate professor of political science, has been named by Chancellor Graham as acting head of the Department of History. The headship of the department has been vacant since the death of Professor C. D. Johns in August 1950.

Miss Alexander has taught at Woman's College since 1935 and in 1949 received the O. Max Gardner Award for the greatest contribution to humanity made by a member of the faculties of the Consolidated University.

DEAN OF STUDENTS

MISS KATHERINE TAYLOR

Chancellor Edward K. Graham has announced two important Woman's College administrative changes.

Miss Katherine Taylor, Dean of Women, assumed the title of Dean of Students with added responsibilities which bring under her general supervision all aspects of the student personnel program and extra-curricular activity.

Miss Mereb Mossman, professor of sociology, becomes Dean of Instruction and professor of sociology. Miss Mossman will work closely with the Chancellor in matters pertaining to the academic program and Miss Taylor will serve in the same capacity with regard to student life.

The new assignments are designed to bring about the most effective operating relationships between those parts of the college program which affect both the academic and student personnel phases of life on the campus.

Miss Taylor was born in Salisbury and received the Bachelor of Arts degree from Woman's College in 1928 and the Master of Arts degree from Radcliffe College. She held the Weil Fellowship and is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Golden Chain, and other honorary and professional organizations. Following her graduation Miss

OFFICERS

Taylor was successively instructor in French at Woman's College, assistant professor and associate professor. Since 1948 she has served as Dean of Women and has held the rank of professor. In 1944-45 Miss Taylor served in the Navy as an officer, stationed at the Naval Training School at Smith College, the Naval Hospital at Portsmouth, Va., and Great Lakes Naval Station.

Miss Mossman was born in Winfield, Kan. She received the Bachelor of Arts degree from Morningside College and the Master of Arts degree from the University of Chicago. Prior to coming to Woman's College in 1937, she was a social worker in Chicago and head of the Department of Sociology at Ginling College in Nanking, China. She has also taught at University of Chicago, Alabama Woman's College, and at the University of North Carolina. Miss Mossman has been consultant for the American Association of Schools of Social Work and the South-eastern Office of the American Red Cross. She is a member of the American Sociological Society, the Southern Sociological Society, the North Carolina Conference of Social Service, the Guilford County Mental Hygiene Society, and the Greensboro Council of

RECEIVES
MARY TAYLOR MOORE
LAMPS

A pair of beautiful bronze lamps with off-white silk shades have been placed in the Virginia Dare Room of Alumnae House in memory of Miss Mary Taylor Moore '03, who served Woman's College as Registrar for 39 years.

Mrs. Julius Cone was chairman of the committee which selected the gift.

At the time of Miss Moore's death in 1948, friends contributed to a fund for the purchase of a permanent memorial. The lamps are marked on the base with very plain, block letters, M.T.M. They are at present in the South end of the room on either side of the fireplace.

The lamps will be a constant reminder of Miss Moore's contribution of standards, of excellence, of dignity, of self-discipline, and of courage, which she made to Woman's College.

TO THE CLASS OF 1951

By CHANCELLOR E. K. GRAHAM
May 28, 1951, Aycock Auditorium

"With all the rights, honors, and responsibilities. . ."

Rights in that you are clearly eligible for certain sorts of employment, certain sorts of advanced study, membership in certain worthy organizations, and a variety of other things which may follow as a consequence of having acquired the prescribed number of credit hours in the prescribed courses, at an academic level deemed fit and proper by the faculty, with the necessary signatures affixed to the appropriate papers by the designated officers of the College—and all of this accomplished while achieving ultimate grace in the eyes of the treasurer's office and the Dean of Women. In a more serious sense, rights in that you must now be recognized as an educated woman by virtue of the degree which you hold. This, at least, is what the world is going to assume. Rights in that you are recognized particularly as a graduate of the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, one of the daughters of alma mater, with the high privilege implicit in this filial relationship.

Honors partly in the familiar sense of recognition, which is among your rights, but more properly in the mediaeval sense of the honor as a benefice, a great estate conferred upon the nobility, the elect—an estate, in your case, not in lands and real property, but in knowledge and in skills, in values, in the sure awareness of what John Erskine has called "the moral obligation to be intelligent."

And Responsibilities. First of all, the responsibility to keep your education a living thing, for the measure of the educated woman is not so much what she has learned in college, but rather to what extent she has developed the capacity for continued growth. The responsibility for continued growth implies, of course, the search for applications of skills and knowledge acquired in college. It implies something more. It implies the responsibility for sound value judgments, the disciplined habit of distinguishing between what is good and what is less than good—a maturing in the concept of excellence. And this concept of excellence must be brought to bear relentlessly in our role as parents, as professionals, and as citizens. For we shall be as a people and as a nation, as we shall be as individuals, precisely what we have the courage to become.

These things, then, are what we have in mind when we confer your degrees "with all the rights, honors, and responsibilities." There are one or two other things unspoken, but just as strongly present.

You are now alumnae, and alma mater has a special claim upon you, and you upon us. It is simply this. All of us depend for our strength upon a deep and abiding belief in a few things that fulfill our dream of what is right in this world, things to which we give our faith because of what they stand for—our families, our church, for example. The College, in terms of the values that it represents, in terms of what you have built into it and what you will build into it, in terms of what we hope it will become, looks to you for loyalty and love because you share in our dream.

It would be a dream of little substance and weak fibre if we felt that there were any reason to be concerned about how you are going to make out after you leave the campus. In taking this view, I realize that I am violating a hallowed academic custom. I can personally vouch for the fact that since 1933, when I was pushed off the nest, graduating classes have been assured that they faced a world in crisis, and that if the members of the graduating class were not worried about it, they ought to be. We hold you in too high respect to try to make you think things are either worse or better than they are. You are free, twenty-one, and sound of wind and limb. In that fine old phrase of recent vintage, "you never had it so good." If we could offer you a world tailor-made for ease and comfort, you would have no particular mission in it, and no joy of accomplishment. You leave us secure in the knowledge that the world in these good old days of 1951 needs you, and that our confidence in you is exceeded only by our pride in what you are.

And now a rather personal message. Within the past few days it has been borne in upon me that a first graduating class is a little like a first love or a first baby, with all the hopes and aspirations attending. There is a story in one of Owen Johnson's books in which he points out that it is the student who leaves the impress upon the teacher, the footprint in the sand, even more than the teacher leaves an impress upon the student. After our first year together, you know what I mean without further elaboration on my part, and you know that you have my warmest gratitude and my affection.

On this rising note, may God bless you one and all!

WEIL FELLOW

Joanne McLean '51, Lumberton, was granted the Henry Weil Fellowship for graduate study during the coming year. In addition to this, she has also been awarded by the Institute of International Education, the Trans-Atlantic Travel Scholarship for study at the University of London from July 9 through August 17. Miss McLean is an English major, specializing in creative writing. She was editor-in-chief of The Yeating, freshman literary magazine, and this year was editor of the Coraddi, student literary magazine. She is a member of Phi Beta Kappa. Miss McLean is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Phillip James McLean of Lumberton, and was born in Shanghai, China.

COMMENCEMENT 1951

SARAH GIBSON BLANDING

Daughter of old Kentucky and the spirit of the pioneers! In your several incarnations as teacher, as leader in the field of student affairs, as gifted administrator in home economics, and now as a guiding star among the presiding professors of our colleges and universities, you have eloquently personified the strength and the resourcefulness of educated woman in our democracy. You have brought to higher education the philosopher's calm faith and clear vision, put into action with the accuracy and the impact of the Kentucky long rifle. In the councils of our Nation, your permeating and constructive concern for the world's youth, the world's hunger, and the world's shelter, has reflected the warmth and the spiritual beauty of the bluegrass. For the things you stand for in the high American tradition of responsibility, courage, and independence—as well as for your distinguished achievements—you hold a special place in our hearts.

And now by virtue of the authority vested in me by the Board of Trustees and the President of the University of North Carolina, I hereby confer upon you the Degree of Doctor of Laws. Woman's College is honored that your name is to be inscribed forever in the roll of her daughters.

HELEN MAUD CAM

Daughter of the Mother England that gave America birth, and now adoptive daughter of our own country, inspired teacher, historian, and pre-eminent scholar. Through your mastery of our past, you have brought to our present a more certain knowledge and appreciation of our cultural ancestry in the Western Europe of the Middle Ages. Graduate and Fellow of the Royal Holloway College of the University of London, Fellow in Bryn Mawr College, Lecturer in the University of London, Research Fellow and Lecturer in Cambridge University, you have kept the scholar's faith, and the recognition accorded you throughout the world is the richly merited—and all too rarely given—acclaim of the spirit of scholarship. Zemurray Radcliffe Professor, and the first woman to hold a professorship in Harvard University, you have enriched the councils of academic life in these United States far beyond the felicitous intellectual climate of New England. Your provocative interests, your stimulating mind, and your unerring sense for beauty and for the values of the spirit, have made you in the space of short years a new tradition in all of our institutions which have felt your gracious presence.

And now by virtue of the authority vested in me by the Board of Trustees and the President of the University of North Carolina, I hereby confer upon you the Degree of Doctor of Laws. Woman's College is honored that your name is to be inscribed forever in the roll of her daughters.

KATE BURR JOHNSON

Daughter of North Carolina and the spirit of progress; master builder—not in stone and brick but in men and women, molding the warped and the twisted, the derelict and the forsaken, into self-respecting human beings who could bring strength instead of weakness to our society. First woman to serve our State as Commissioner of Public Welfare, you witnessed and were a part of North Carolina's pioneering leadership in the field of public welfare. As Superintendent of the New Jersey State Home for Girls, you brought to that State and to the Nation the greatness of spirit, the skill, the imagination, and the tireless energy that we have come to know so well. Your fellow North Carolinians rejoice that now you have taken up the laurel wreath of retirement, earned through your magnificent career, you have come home again. And we rejoice that we may share your counsel and your inspiration.

And now by virtue of the authority vested in me by the Board of Trustees and the President of the University of North Carolina, I hereby confer upon you the Degree of Doctor of Humane Letters. Woman's College is honored that your name is to be inscribed forever in the roll of her daughters.

HONORARY DEGREE RECIPIENTS

Shown above are: Miss Sarah Blanding, left, president of Vassar College, who was awarded the degree of Doctor of Laws; Dr. Helen Maud Cam, center, Harvard professor of history, who was awarded the degree of Doctor of Laws; and Mrs. Kate Burr Johnson, retired superintendent of the New Jersey State Home for Girls, who was awarded the degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, at the Commencement Exercises at Woman's College, Monday, May 28, 1951.

Commencement Address

WOMAN'S COLLEGE
UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA
MAY 28, 1951

By SARAH GIBSON FLANDING, President of Vassar College

As I look at my audience today, I wish that I might say something that would have real value for you in the future. I make this wish because I believe at the moment when the student is graduated from college she is conscious of the fact that familiar shores are receding and that she must steer her course in new waters, assuming a confidence that she may not feel. Of course, she has her navigation papers; the college has seen to that and has tested both her theoretical and practical knowledge. But no situation can be created prior to the event that is like the reality one encounters immediately after graduation from college.

I am assuming that you are entering upon jobs almost as soon as your degrees are awarded. If you are like the young women in the senior class at Vassar, many of you are planning joyfully to be married before the year is over, and probably all the rest of you are determined to be married before five years are past. Usually marriage is not considered a job and, according to the census taker, a housewife is an unemployed person. But it seems to me a good idea to prepare for marriage as for a job and after marriage to submit yourself periodically to an appraisal of your achievements, development and success in this major activity of women. Women are apt to say glibly that marriage is a career but do nothing to advance themselves as in other careers.

Today the American homemaker has a heavy task laid out for her. Agnes Rogers in her book, Women Are Here to Stay, seems to put quite well what is expected of the housewife:

"The American woman today must be an expert housekeeper, doing all the cooking, washing and cleaning with skill, dispatch and good humor (and why not with all those fine household machines at her command!) She must be a wise, conscientious and loving mother, always there when the children need her, but standing aside when her presence might threaten the full development of their individuality. She must be a delightful, helpful, thrifty wife, ready to administer comfort or to share in gay adventure. She must be a useful member of the community, informed on broad political trends as well as possible danger spots in the local school board. She is also a citizen of the world and should be able to name the current president of France and have constructive ideas on what to do with the atom bomb and say what is wrong with our foreign policy."

To think of marriage as a perpetual love feast is certainly a mistake, and a changed attitude might effect an important improvement in the family life of our country.

Let's I sound more like Dorothy Dix than the president of a women's college, I'll merely drop that hint to those whose minds are filled with matrimony and then discuss the responsibilities of all of you whether you marry or enter a professional career.

Probably the majority of you expect to be employed outside the home for at least a few years following your graduation. The opportunities are almost bewilderingly numerous and varied. Also the pay is alluringly high as compared with pre-1939 or even pre-Korean days. The youth of today are wise enough to know that we buy this workers' market at terrific price and that the speed-up of a defense program is inimical to social progress and a good personal life. With this knowledge isn't it reasonable, however, to take what you can get, to let the high pay compensate in so far as it can for the things taken away? Saving towards a future more promising than the present may perhaps be possible and is certainly highly recommended by the best authorities. Doesn't this mean quite definitely that one should search out the highest paid job for which one is qualified? In the very commercial-minded world in which we live, can't we be assured that the wage paid reflects the importance of the job to society? Why should one hesitate to take the "best" position offered, and isn't size of salary a primary consideration?

Bequest to Library Honors Dr. Anna Gove

By VIRGINIA TERRELL LATHROP '23

Nothing could be more fitting than that "the most beautiful book in the world" should start a memorial collection for Dr. Anna M. Gove, for 43 years the college physician, and a pioneer woman in the medical profession in North Carolina.

The announcement of a bequest to the College Library in memory of Dr. Gove late in April was followed almost immediately by the purchase of the first book for the collection, a facsimile of the famous Book of Kells, complete in 678 pages, the 48 "great pages" in color. It is one of a limited edition of 400, in two volumes.

The bequest of $21,000 was given by Miss Maria C. Brace, of Baltimore, Md., a cousin of Dr. Gove. Miss Brace was for 18 years head of the business and economic department of Enoch Pratt Free Library in Baltimore, which received a similar legacy.

Establishment of the new Library collection provides a third memorial on the campus to Dr. Gove. The college Infirmary built in 1912, soon to be replaced by a beautiful new building on the edge of Peabody Park bears her name, and in her own will, at her death in 1947, she set up a fund for scholarships at the college.

Memorials, bequests and buildings are tangible means of perpetuating a great personality. Woman's College is fortunate in having monuments to the service of such people as Dr. Gove to inspire the generations of students and faculty who were not privileged to know them. But for the thousands of alumnae who knew Dr. Gove in her 43 years on the campus it takes but a flash of thought to bring back the personality that was so beautiful in its devotion to professional life and personal friends.

It took real courage for a woman to study medicine half a century ago. Anna Gove grew up in a small New England community, Whitefield, New Hampshire, where her father was a doctor. By a strange coincidence some years ago, after having known Dr. Gove in Greensboro for many years, I became friends with a newcomer to Asheville who had spent her early life across the street from the Goves in Whitefield. As a girl she knew and admired young Anna who rode about the countryside with her father on his calls, dreaming of her own future and determined to carry on in his footsteps.

This friend talked often about Dr. Gove, always with the same admiration that followed her to Medical College in New York where she earned her degree, and on to North Carolina where she was known, in the nineties as "the female lady doctress". When she came to Greensboro Dr. Gove traveled extensively. She was in Europe when World War I broke out and returned there later as a physician with the Red Cross, serving two years with the children's relief division in Marseilles and Ardeche, and with the Smith College unit. In the early twenties she took a leave of absence and traveled in the Orient.

It was in her home, I think, that Dr. Gove radiated best the warmth and friendliness that we remember about her. A woman of small stature, she seemed taller because of her dignity and exquisite grooming. She was the epitome of the physician, a soothing voice, a smiling face, twinkling eyes, sense of humor, professional assurance and poise, and kindness always. Her home on Highland Avenue, which she built so that her father and mother might come to live with her, was filled with interesting pieces brought back from her travels, and boro in 1893, just a year after the College opened, there were only two other women practicing medicine in the State, Dr. Annie Alexander of Charlotte, and a Dr. Jones of Goldsboro who practiced with her husband.

Dr. Gove took care of the college students first in the old Infirmary which was built in 1895 on the site of the Soda Shop. When the present Infirmary was built in 1912 the old one started a long career of classrooms, practice rooms, and Public Relations offices, its name changed to Little Guilford. It was in this building that Dr. Gove pulled the College through the critical typhoid epidemic of 1899. One of her other contributions to the college community was the draining of a swamp behind the McIver home and "Old Guilford" Hall which stood on the site of the Alumnae House.

with well used and comfortable furniture. Many alumnae, on visits to the campus, were invited to supper with Dr. Gove, and often cordial notes urged them to come and stay with her during Commencement or some other college occasion.

Much of the greatness of Woman's College is due to the early members of the faculty who caught Dr. McIver's vision and carried it on after his brief years of service. A number of those pioneers were women who dared to embark on careers still new to their sex, and by their example inspire the women they were educating. Dr. Gove was one of those, and the college is blessed in having her personality stamped upon so many generations of students, and perpetuated in so splendid a collection as the bequest from her cousin will make possible.

North Carolina and the Southern Tradition in 1951

E. K. GRAHAM, Annual Meeting, North Carolina P.T.A.
Winston-Salem, N. C., July 18, 1951

If, in the course of my remarks this evening, I touch on any point which is not controversial, it will happen by sheer accident.

North Carolina and the Southern Tradition in 1951, however controversial, has something to commend it as a topic. At least it deals with the here-and-now. We have a Southern Tradition: We must have one because we talk so much about it. North Carolina is a part of the South, and our traditions are a part of the Southern Tradition, the part that most concerns us. And it is 1951, although as we look around us we may be tempted to wish that it were not—that it were 1851, say, before our present troubles were upon us, or 2051, when we should no longer be around to worry about them.

There are many things about the South that we might wish were different, but wishing that the South were different does us no more good than wishing that the times were different. What we must decide is not what we are going to do with the South that we wish we had. What we must decide is what we are going to do with the South that we have.

I am going to talk tonight as a Southerner and as a North Carolinian, who has come back within the past few months to the State that he loves above any other in the world. I am going to talk as a parent, who, like you, thinks of the future of his children and the future of North Carolina as inseparable. I am going to talk also as a teacher, who, like you, is privileged to share in the exciting responsibility that rests upon our schools and our colleges in these good old days of 1951. I am going to direct my remarks primarily to the way in which the Southern Tradition bears upon our public schools and colleges in North Carolina.

Since tradition means so many different things to so many different people, I ought in all fairness to offer a definition of the term as I propose to use it. Burke has a definition of the state which might well be paraphrased for the purpose.

"The state," he said, "is a partnership not only between those living, but between those who are living, those who are dead, and those who are to be born." A tradition is fundamentally much the same—a partnership of ideas, customs, and values which we share not only with our contemporaries, but also with those who have gone before us, and with our children and our children's children.

Tradition is important, especially where it is the tradition of a region. For the regions make up the nation. The national tradition is no more than the sum of the tradition of the regions. The strength of the regions is the strength of the nation. And the national interest is no more than the sum of the interests of the regions, and the interests of all of the people who inhabit them.

Tradition is a dynamic thing, a timeless quality of our character, living from generation to generation, and carrying with it the element of regional strength. It is not static. Once it becomes static, it becomes dead, and is no longer a tradition.

Perhaps there are many elements in the Southern Tradition in North Carolina. Here are those which seem to me the most dynamic, and hence the most important for our times and for times yet to come.

First of all is the element of courage. We have a heritage of courage as a people. The Regulators, the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence, the proud record of the North Carolina regiments in the War Between the States, the patience and the bravery of our people during the black days of Military District No. 10, the way that we have traveled the long road back from Reconstruction and the carpetbaggers—all of these and many more attest our tradition of courage. It goes back to the time that the first white settlement was made on Roanoke Island in our State, and the first North Carolinians from England

Reorganization Coordinates All Student Activities

Several changes have been effected at Woman's College this summer under a reorganization of student affairs, placing the work of all departments dealing with student life under the general direction of Miss Katherine Taylor, Dean of Students. Under the new set-up, placement, loans, scholarships, self-help, religious activities, and supervision of residence halls will be added to her former responsibilities.

Mrs. Josephine Schaeffer, counselor in North Spencer Hall since September 1950, will also be the Placement Officer. Mrs. Kathleen Pettit Hawkins, who has most recently been secretary to the Loan and Scholarship Committee, will be Student Aid Officer in charge of loans, scholarships, and self-help. Mrs. Ruth Abbott Clarke, counselor in Bailey Hall, will take on the added duties of coordinating the Religious Activities on the campus, and Miss Laura Lucas will be assistant director of residence halls.

Mrs. Schaeffer, native of Asheville, received her degree from University of North Carolina where she was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. She served in the SPARS during World War II and was on the staff of the Veteran's Hospital at Green, N. C., before coming to Woman's College.

Mrs. Hawkins has been on the staff at Woman's College since she was a student in 1921. She was secretary to Miss Laura Coit during the twenties, was later post-mistress at Woman's College, and for the past several years has served as Loan and Scholarship secretary. In addition to her regular work, she has for many years been in the office of information in Administration Building.

Mrs. Clarke, graduate of Woman's College 1931, is the widow of the late Rev. Eugene Clarke, who was pastor of the Baptist Church in Warsaw at the time of his death. She came to Woman's College in September 1949. Miss Maxine Garner '39, who was Religious Activities Director from 1942 to 1950, was on leave of absence from the College last year and has decided to continue her studies in Aberdeen, Scotland, another year.

Miss Lucas, graduate of Woman's College 1947, has been assistant to Miss Helen Moxley, who, until her resignation in July to be married, was Assistant Director of Residence Halls. Miss Lucas will assume the position of Assistant Director of Residence Halls September 1. Miss Carolyn Jones '46 will be Miss Lucas' assistant.

Former Faculty Member Marries

Miss Isabel Ferguson, who taught history at Woman's College from 1928 to 1930, was married May 5 in Fairfax, Va., to Mr. William Hargadine, Jr. They are living at 350 S. Smedley Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

"Miss Gould"

By MARGARET L. COIT '41

"Miss Gould retired this year." The Freshmen, coming in this Fall, won't know what that means. But the older students, thirty years of older students, graduates and under-graduates of Woman's College, they will know—and remember.

They will remember "Miss Gould," with her soft, Sea-Island voice and the upswept black brows . . . There is so much they'll remember about her . . . her droll turns of humor and little explosions of laughter . . . the lovable absent-mindedness, all "taken off" in the Senior Unmusicals, for she was something of a "character" on campus, and this is what every beloved and remembered teacher must be.

You could always lead her aside, down fascinating little by-paths, and those "sentimental journeys" were what you remembered afterwards. You learned, for instance, that Gone With The Wind was a "best-seller," because it re-invoked the past in terms of the thoughts and emotions of the present—and that it failed as great literature, perhaps, for that very reason. She was conservative, but she made conservatism exciting, and gave the children of an uncertain world a certain standard to judge by. Faulty grammar was faulty grammar. Winston Churchill might end a sentence with a preposition, but not she; and not even Churchill could make it right. And who will ever forget her vehement aversion to the promiscuous use of the word, "lady," or fail to realize that she was herself her own definition of that over-used and mis-used word? She was and is a lady, a great lady in the great tradition; or what gallant old South Carolina-born Bernard Baruch defines as "a gentlewoman."

Teaching was her life, not her livelihood; to it she gave, not only her best thought, but her best self. She dressed for her pupils, not in any drab "school-teacherish" way, but in winery purples and reds that set off her own damask-rose coloring and the slender figure of a sixteen year-old. Usually she favored suits, trimly tailored, but of a feminine softness, and occasionally could not resist the temptation of a dress, its simplicity accented by a froth of Victorian ruffles.

For Miss Gould is a Victorian, perhaps the last Victorian at Woman's College. She came out of the Old South, and although not old, she spanned two eras of time. Growing up in the aftermath of Reconstruction, out of that dark and bitter time she brought not bitterness, but understanding; not rigidity, but grace. From outward tumult she strengthened the bulwark of her own inner serenity. Hers was serenity for troubled times during those terrible years of the 1930's, when worlds were crashing, and you could remember that she, too, had lived through the aftermath of a shattered civilization.

Woman's College has always been noted for its personal "small-college" attitude towards its students. In this, faculty advisers and "big sisters" have all played their part. But it is teachers like Miss Gould that have made Woman's College's friendliness such a rare and human thing. She was an adviser beyond the call of duty to those she knew best—her own students. Youngsters in her classes, bewildered and alone, only fifteen and sixteen years old some of them; from lonely Wilkes County or far-off New York or New England suddenly found that they were not alone. They had Miss Gould—they could come to her and talk and be sure of her affection and sympathy. She would have made a beautiful mother, but had she been so, her mothering would have been lost to scores of students who needed it so much.

She was never content to mark a "D" or an "F" in the grade-book beside the name of a hither-to outstanding pupil. She would not take failure for an answer. She called the pupil to her, and gently but probingly uncovered the cause of that failure—trouble at home, perhaps, financial or personal; the illness or death of the father or mother and the sudden emptiness which no college world could fill; a letter that did not come; fear over the fate of brother, sweetheart, or husband overseas. And because Miss Gould viewed these failures as the temporary things they were, because her faith in these unhappy girls remained unshaken, many "came back" to justify that faith, and to reflect credit upon their college and teachers. In fact, some of them today, are English teachers, themselves!

Classes with Miss Gould were a part of old McIver building, with its slit-like offices and dark and pushing corridors; the smells of floor-oil and splintery old wood and crumbling bricks and plaster. They were a part of the long-drawn spring of North Carolina, where as the January Jasmine tossed forth golden coins of bloom, students and teacher alike came into the morning of young England's Renaissance, "of sporting Kyd and Marlowe's mighty line."

In Miss Gould's classrooms, somehow, it was always spring-time. It was a time of awakening. There, she re-sharpened the fine edge of enthusiasm. There, English literature was not just the same old story retold, but an adventure in rediscovery. There, with us, she relived what had so long been a part of her own life. There, the tortured doubts and passions and loves of young "Kit" Marlowe became a part of ourselves. They were so young, these poets of England's past. They were born young and they died young and they were young along with us: Chatterton and Shelley, Keats, his patterned words flaming like a stained-glass window in the sun; and Burns, in whose rhythmic verse you could hear the beating of his own warm heart.

Poets, like religions, are a matter of individual taste and temperament. We knew who Miss Gould's favorites were. Who could forget her love for that glorious Renaissance-man, Spenser? Or for Wordsworth, whose low voice spoke with such muted, yet passionate authority; or Browning, who could encompass a human soul and an era of time in a single poem? Even more important than making her favorites ours, she lighted in all her many students a love for what they could receive and she would give—whether it be the obscure and crabbed James Thomson, or the precisions of Walter Savage Landor. She, herself, was never particularly fond of Lord Byron; yet among her students were those for whom, through her teaching, the discovery of Byron was the discovery of what verse and poetry could mean. There were those who came away from her Spenser classes, not only sharing her own love, but aflame with excitement over a lesser and yet mighty figure of that troubled time, John Donne, whose voice sounded echoes down the centuries, and whose passionate, torturous thought so fore-shadowed the metaphysical obscurities of our own day. And looking on Miss Gould as she gave Spenser and John Donne to us, we knew what Donne meant in writing:

"No Spring, nor Summer Beauty
hath such grace,
As I have seen in one Autumnal
face . . ."

Being a teacher is so much more than just teaching. Miss Gould was more than a teacher; she was an inspiration. Miss Gould is gone now from Woman's College. And she has taken a part of Woman's College with her.

Dorothy Clement Goes to University of Arizona

Dorothy Clement '23, counselor in Hinshaw Hall since 1946, resigned July 1, to become assistant Dean of Women at the University of Arizona in Tucson. She will be assistant to Dr. Karen Carlson, Woman's College Registrar since 1949, who was appointed Dean of Women, University of Arizona, July 31.

A native of Martinsville, Va., Miss Clement graduated from Woman's College in 1923, taught piano at W.C.T.C. in Cullowhee, State College in Bowling Green, Ohio, and at the School for the Blind in Raleigh, until 1929. She was a member of the Woman's College music faculty from 1929 until 1942 when she joined the American Red Cross and saw four years of foreign service in the European theatre during World War II. She returned to Woman's College in September 1946, as a counselor.

Miss Clement is a member of Pi Kappa Lambda, honorary music fraternity, had recently been elected president of the North Carolina League of Women Voters for 1951-52, and was active in the work of the Woman's College Alumnae Association.

Nancy Blanton Speaks for the Senior Class

COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES, MONDAY, MAY 28, 1951

EDITOR'S NOTE: Nancy Blanton, Winston-Salem, was president Student Government 1950-51; everlasting president Class of 1951; Golden Chain, honor society; Phi Beta Kappa; Science major; clerical assistant in the Alumnae Office 1950-51.

Class of '51, Parents, Faculty,
and Friends:

Why is it time passes so quickly? None of our great scientists of the 20th century have come up with an answer to that one. Why does some time fly—and then other time just drag by? Perhaps the reason that scientists have not tackled this problem is that it isn't a scientific problem. The answer is obvious. Those times which are good, full, and happy, pass on wings; those which are not good, unhappy and empty, are the slow never-ending ones. Our four years of time at the Woman's College have been of the good variety. It was only yesterday that we began to be students at the Woman's College and today we are concluding that period of our lives which has been so chock full of happiness.

There is a little more to the explanation of fleeting time than just goodness, fullness, and happiness. The scientist would say that there are factors to be considered which produced the happiness, goodness, and fullness. The principal factors influencing this particular phenomenon of fleeting time are four in number.

First of all—the parents of the Class of '51. There were several low moments over the past four years—some came when we were afraid we were not going to pass that freshman history or was it biology?—or junior year, when we suddenly stopped and wondered whether or not our major was the one we really wanted, or when we were just homesick for home and home folks. You gave us encouragement through all these and many trials, without making babies of us, but strengthening us instead. Then there were low moments about which you probably never knew—those times in which we stopped and wondered if you could ever be proud of us—if we had failed to measure up to your expectations for us. I suppose at these times it was the knowledge of your faith in us that made us come out on top in the end.

The second factor is the faculty of the Woman's College. Without you, of course, our achievements as students would have been impossible. You opened to us the various pathways of learning and guided us in choosing one on which we wanted to concentrate our efforts. You guided us over the rough places, advised us, taught us and were our friends.

The third factor is the friends and fellow students of the Class of '51. They have been factors simply by virtue of their being our friends and adding to our happiness. Our fellow students have shown us love and great respect which have enhanced the fullness of our four years.

And last of all—the Class of '51 itself. If we had not wanted our college days to be good, they could never have been. And simply wanting would not have made them good either—we had to work at it, which we did in abundance.

There we have the answer to why our time here has gone so swiftly. And we know that we would not have wished it to have been any other way.

Now that we are commencing on a new phase of our lives—a phase for which we are better prepared for having lived and loved and learned here in this place—we know that if time flies as it has here, then we shall have been successful. And you, Class of '51, will be successful—we haven't borne the title "the best that W. C. has known" for four years without justification. And that 2001 reunion will be a reality before we know it!

At this time, an analogy of college life and its preparation for the future is in order—but I have been able to find no such analogy. None that I can find seems to fit or seems to show clearly just what it means to have completed successfully four years at the Woman's College and to be ready to take one's place in society. We don't need an analogy—each of us knows what it has meant. That meaning will become apparent to others who come in contact with us as the Class of '51 marches on toward a wealth of happiness and success.

Consolidated University Graduate Fellow

MISS ANN EDWARDS

Miss Ann Edwards '51, New Bern, who received the Consolidated University Graduate Fellowship to U. N. C. Miss Edwards was active in Play-likers, Cor-addi, and other student activities.

President Gray Granted Part-time Leave By Board

The Board of Trustees on June 18th granted part-time leave to President Gordon Gray to serve as Director of the Psychological Strategy Board, at the request of President Harry Truman. Mr. Gray will spend part of each week in Washington, D. C., working at his new duties. He was sworn in as Director on July 17th.

DR. E. R. CLINCHY MAKES BACCALAUREATE ADDRESS

Dr. Everett R. Clinchy, president of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, gave the Baccalaureate address at Woman's College, Sunday, May 27, in Aycock Auditorium. Miss Nellie Bugg, president of the senior class, presided and music for the occasion was furnished by the college choir under the direction of Mr. George M. Thompson.

Dr. Clinchy developed for the Senior's four reasons for hope in this atomic age:

"1. We are sharing with more than 50 other nations in the first collective police action against aggression in the history of mankind.

"2. Our generation is the first to take collective economic action to raise the standard of living of all peoples on an earth-wide scale.

"3. UNESCO and UN's commissions such as that on Human Rights provide another sign of hope. Collective action in sharing scientific, cultural, and educational values and methods is a great gain.

"4. Our generation is making the first scientific, educational and religious approach to control the breakdowns in human relations. There is the promise of amazing gains in group relations that will match the miracles which modern medicine has achieved in managing breakdowns in physical health.

"Philosophers from Plato and Aristotle to Aquinas and Lincoln have given us the prescriptions by which we can make our best hopes today come true. In sum, there are three: "Live by the indivisible ideals of virtue and knowledge.

"Extend knowledge through education in the home, the church, the school and the community.

"Organize people of goodwill who refuse to accept a fatalistic view of history and who will courageously work for the best possible common destiny of all mankind."

WANTED: MORE CHILDREN

College graduates want more children, and they are having them. The recent alumnae of The Woman's College are doing their share.

During the past six years the Population Reference Bureau, a non-profit organization of Washington, D. C., has conducted an annual survey of the children of college graduates. These national studies now show that the birth rates to the end of the first ten years out of college have steadily increased for both men and women from the class of 1936 to the class of 1941.

Men graduates of the class of 1941 who are now celebrating their tenth reunion can boast of families 39 per cent larger than could their brother graduates of the class of 1936 when they celebrated their tenth. The corresponding increase in size of family among women graduates for the class of 1941 was 25 per cent over their sisters of 1936.

Last winter the Woman's College Alumnae Office cooperated with the Bureau in a survey to determine birth rates among the members of our class of 1941. In this era of atoms and attrition, intelligent, trained people are increasingly needed to steer our country toward peace and strengthen our democracy. The children of college graduates, benefiting from their parents' training and intelligence, are vitally needed for our country's future.

The Woman's College alumnae of the class of 1941 are off to a fairly good start familywise. Our women of '41 report 1.12 children apiece. Although these are below the 2.1 children estimated as necessary for replacement, it is evident that in their remaining productive years they can more than replace themselves if they decide to do so.

Seventy-four per cent of our alumnae of this class have married at the end of 10 years, and 84% of the reporting wives have had at least one baby. There are 1.52 children per wife and 1.80 offspring per mother. Keep it up, '41!

Unhappily, the Woman's College alumnae are just below the national average of 1.19 for the 140 colleges where the women of 1941 were reviewed. But men seem to be having more children than women, for alumni of the class of 1941 from 154 colleges reported an average of 1.42 children apiece.

Among the colleges where the alumni of the class of 1941 were surveyed, Marion College, Indiana, reported the most children, averaging 2.36 apiece. Saint Mary's College, Notre Dame, Ind., alumnae of '41 lead the women with 2.15 babies each. Among our neighbors, the alumnae of the class from Meredith College report only 1.06 babies apiece, while Guilford College women average 1.16 and Guilford men, but .76 of a child. Wake Forest men of '41 report 1.42 infants each. Sweet Briar averages 1.66 children per alumna, and Randolph-Macon Woman's College reports 1.43 per graduate of 1941.

But the background is ominous. Each year both the 10th and the 25th reunion classes are chosen for review, the former to learn the more recent trend and the latter because their families are almost complete. Nationwide reports from the classes of 1921-1926 show that 25 years after graduation they average only 1.77 children per alumnus and 1.28 per alumna. Yet approximately 2.1 are needed for replacement of the parents.

The Woman's College class of 1926 was able to report only 1.24 children per alumna, a quarter-century later. Falling far below 2.1, these women are failing to replace themselves by 41%. Not even the married graduates of '26 achieve replacement, for our wives of that class report but 1.63 children apiece. There are 2.08 children per mother, but these fail to compensate for the unmarried and childless members of the class.

The average throughout the nation for the class of 1926 is 1.84 children per alumnus and 1.18 per alumna, a failure to reproduce themselves by 12% for the men and 44% for the women. It would seem that although old colleges never die, their graduates are fading away! For these ratios indicate that the children of all the 71,500 graduates in the country of the class of 1926 will number 18,000 less than their parents. If the same proportions apply to the much larger classes of 1951, the loss from this year's graduates alone will be at least 86,000.

The college leading in the birth rate study of 1926 is Wartburg College, Iowa, with the all-time high of 4.13 children per alumnus. The alumnae from Brigham Young University uphold Utah's tradition of large families by taking top honors among the women with 2.62 children apiece. The Woman's College alumnae lead the women in the class reviewed in the state, followed by Meredith alumnae with 1.21; Guilford women with only .90 and East Carolina College women with but .64. Wake Forest alumni of '26 average 1.87, and Guilford men, 1.54. Sweet Briar alumnae are ahead of us with 1.74 babies apiece, as are Randolph-Macon Woman's College alumnae with 1.45.

The Bureau uses the survey as a barometer of America's collegiate birth rate. Since reports have been received from 127,000 graduates to date, a reliable picture has been obtained. With so few of the college groups replacing themselves, the outlook for future generations is depressing. Democracy being based on government by the people, it is evident that the calibre of the government depends on the quality of its people. As our abler people enroll in colleges in increasing numbers, the effect on the next generation will be most unfortunate if they receive along with their diplomas the tradition of small families.

On the hopeful side is the progressive increase in family size found among the graduates of 1936 through 1941, 10 years after graduation. As more and more young graduates discover that larger families are to be desired and are possible, the old pattern of too few children will be abandoned.

Class Day - - - "As We See It"

Class Day of 1951 was a delightful departure from the usual program in that a view of the past, a resume of the present, and a dip into the future were presented very cleverly. Julia Ross Lambert, daughter of Julia (Ross) Lambert '24, was general Class Day chairman.

Nellie Bugg, senior class president, welcomed parents and friends and set the stage for Sarah Carter who highlighted Class Days of the past. Hazelbelle Pearsall reviewed the past four years at Woman's College and Ann Young projected the group to their fiftieth Reunion, "jet-propelled" and "radio-actively lipstickied."

Miss Dorothy Davis, 1951 class chairman, installed the everlasting officers (see photo page 1), and also announced the awards and honors (see page 17).

The gift of the senior class to the college, a check for a television set for the new Student Union Building, was presented by Nancy Blanton, everlasting president of the class.

Music for the occasion was by "The Darlinettes."

Ninety-one Per Cent Of W. C. Students Cast Votes

A record of 91 per cent of the student body, or more than 2,000 students, went to the polls in March to elect Student Government officers.

Eighteen leaders were named, two of them, June Rainey, Salisbury, President, and Betty Bullard, Charlotte, vice-president, in the primary which was most unusual.

Officers named in the final round of balloting were: Secretary, Lura Clingenpeel, Bluefield, W. Va.; treasurer, Betty Robinson, Winston-Salem; chief marshal, Jo Pharr (daughter of Sadie (Patton) Pharr '17), Charlotte; Y.W.C.A. president, Joan Wrenn, Springfield, Pa.; Recreation Association president, Mattie Baringer, Albemarle; president of Interfaith Council, Anne Hall, Charlotte; editor of the Carolynian, student newspaper, Rosemary Boney, Clinton; editor of Pine Needles, yearbook, Jackie Jernigan, Raleigh; editor of Coraddi, student literary magazine, Mary (Idol) Breeze, Pleasant Garden; college cheerleader, Bobbie Strickland, Smithfield; college social chairman, Elaine Holly, Davidson.

Seven rising Juniors who will serve as house presidents in the freshman residence halls next year are: Sara Butts (daughter of Georgia (Wade) Butts, class of '25), Halifax; Elizabeth Hill, Wilmington; Dot Kerner, Kernersville; Polly McDuffie, Asheville; Lydia Moody, Siler City; Mary Anna Peck, Shelby; and Jean Tandy, (daughter of Ruth (Reynolds) Tandy '28), Asheville.

Woman's College students also voted to increase next year's student activity fee in order to maintain the varied activities of college life under increased prices. Patsy Fowler, Durham, served as elections chairman during the annual vote.

Several Faculty and Alumnae Go to Europe

Several members of Woman's College Faculty are traveling in Europe this summer. Mrs. Annie Beam Funderburk '16, Romance Language Department, left May 29, on Liberte, French Line, for the summer in France. She will tour provinces of Brittany and of Provence, and will spend most of her time in Paris, studying at the Sorbonne.

Miss Agnes Coxie '27, of the Home Economics Department, left in June for an Air France tour, and Miss Katherine Kehoe spent July and August in Europe.

Frances Butler '48, Marjorie Toole, counselors; Dr. Meta Miller, Romance Language Department; and Celeste Ulrich '46 who teaches at Madison College, Harrisonburg, Va., are spending the summer in France.

Mrs. Emma S. Avery Named Greensboro Mother of Year

Mrs. Emma (Sharp) Avery '05 was named Greensboro Mother of the Year by the Greensboro Merchants Association in May. She retired in June after 27 years of teaching, 26 of them in Greensboro and one year in Reidsville.

She is the mother of five children, four sons and a daughter, Emma (Avery) Jeffress '40.

Her activities in Greensboro in addition to running her home, include church work, League of Women Voters, Woman's College Alumnae Association, P.T.A., state and national education associations, garden club, American Legion Auxiliary and Friends of the Library.

Miss Moxley Weds Mr. Dawkins Henry

Miss Helen Moxley, assistant director of residence halls, was married to Mr. Dawkins Henry, of Salisbury, N. C., July 26, 1951.

Miss Moxley has been on the staff at Woman's College since 1942. She received her B.S. degree from Battle Creek College and her M.A. from Columbia University. Her sister, Mary Moxley '46, Ardmore, Oklahoma, came for the wedding.

Mr. Henry is the brother of Sarah (Henry) Smith '31 and Ruth Henry '26. The couple will make their home in Salisbury.

Certificates Given to 99 One-Year Commercial

Certificates were presented to ninety-nine graduates of the one-year Commercial Department by Chancellor E. K. Graham and Mr. George M. Joyce, head of the department, Friday, May 25, at 11 o'clock in the Alumnae House.

Miss Lois Holton, Stantonsburg, president of the class, presided at the exercises and Miss Julia Scott, Leaksville, is everlasting president. Music for the occasion was by Phillip Morgan, pianist, and Jean Schneck, contralto, both of the music faculty. Miss Schneck sang "The Unforeseen" by Cyril Scott and "A Birthday" by Huntington Woodman, accompanied by Mr. Morgan, who also played "Capriccio, Opus 116, No. 7" by Brahms.

Chancellor E. K. Graham gave the main address and Dr. Claude Bowen, pastor of the First Baptist Church in Greensboro, pronounced the benediction, after the group sang the College Song.

Notice to Alumnae Chapters

We hope you will begin now making plans for your Founder's Day Meeting Friday, October 5. The program will be broadcast again this year through the facilities of WFMY and the Dixie FM net work, we hope. According to reports from the majority of the chapters, the alumnae are in favor of continuing the plan for simultaneous Founder's Day meetings. We hope to have even more than the 53 meetings which were held last Fall.

If there is not a chapter organized in your community and you would be willing to help, please write the Alumnae Office at once for lists, suggestions for organizing, etc. We will be most grateful to you.

Dr. Carlson Resigns As W. C. Registrar

Dr. Karen Carlson, registrar of Woman's College since 1949, resigned to become Dean of Women at the University of Arizona on July 31. Her resignation was announced by Chancellor Edward K. Graham.

Dr. Carlson is returning to the university where she was assistant dean of women from 1945 to 1949. She came to Woman's College from University of Arizona, succeeding Miss Mary Taylor Moore, who died in 1948.

Miss Mildred Newton, director of Admissions, has assumed temporary responsibility for the Registrar's Office, under the direction of Miss Merib Mossman, Dean of Instruction, pending the appointment of a Registrar or Acting Registrar.

Dr. Logan Wilson Will Be University Vice President

Dr. Logan Wilson's appointment as vice president of the University of North Carolina, in charge of academic affairs, was approved by the University Board of Trustees May 22, at their meeting in the Alumnae House at Woman's College.

Dr. Wilson is Dean of Newcomb College and head of the Department of Sociology at Tulane University, New Orleans. He did his undergraduate work at Sam Houston College, Southern Methodist and the University of Texas, and received his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Harvard University.

Dr. Wilson will assume his duties September 1.

News from Local Alumnae Chapters

Alamance All- University Barbecue

Alumni and alumnae of Burlington of the three units of the University enjoyed a barbecue June 15, at the Municipal Stadium in Burlington, with President Gordon Gray as the featured speaker. Around 160 alumni attended with Woman's College well represented in the group.

Atlanta, Ga.

The Atlanta Chapter of the Woman's College Alumnae Association met on Monday evening, May 14, at the home of Frances (Horton) Burroughs '42. Twelve alumnae were present.

The meeting was called to order by President Helena Williams '46, and a report of the fashion show was heard. The Chapter voted to start a $50 Scholarship Fund, to be given to a Woman's College student, beginning this Fall.

Bootsie (Smith) Webb '47 and Theo (Elliott) Taylor, members of the nominating committee, presented the slate of officers for the coming year who were elected unanimously: President, Evelyn (Cavileer) Bash '36; vice-president, Mollie (Mitchell) Smith '29; secretary, Mary Lou (Mackie) Bryant '42; treasurer, Edna (Umstead) Harris '43.

The Chapter decided to concentrate on correcting the addresses of the alumnae in the Atlanta area, and discussed plans for contacting the local high schools concerning College Day next fall. Delicious refreshments were served and a short social hour was enjoyed by all.

Theo (Elliott) Taylor '48, Secretary

Avery County

The Avery County Chapter of the Alumnae Association had Miss Katherine Taylor, Dean of Women, and Mrs. Betty Brown Jester, Alumnae Secretary, as speakers at a dinner meeting held in Newland on Thursday evening, May 3.

Miss Taylor told of the construction program now underway at the Woman's College, and of the many improvements on the campus within the past few years. Mrs. Jester showed moving pictures of recent activities at the college, and of several buildings either under construction or recently completed.

As a result of this meeting, we have a much deeper and warmer regard for our Alma Mater than ever before.

Avery County Alumnae present were Miss Jane Guy '45 and Mrs. Sam Cartner (Margaret Corbin) '47 of Newland, Miss Edith Cardwell '38 of Elk Park, and Dr. Mary Eliason '25, Misses Laura Hall '25, Lenore Pierce Sp. '46-'47, and Elizabeth Whitson '39 of Banner Elk.

Others present were Miss Sue Underhill, '30, counselor at Woman's College, and Mrs. Thelma Robertson and Mrs. Blaine C. Miller (Geraldine Bingham '46) of Spruce Pine.

Elizabeth Whitson, Secretary.

Buncombe County

An informal reception honoring Chancellor Edward K. Graham, who was the main speaker, preceded the Spring luncheon of Buncombe County Alumnae at the George Vanderbilt Hotel in Asheville, Saturday, April 21. Dr. Graham, who was introduced by Mr. George Stephens, of Asheville, member of the University Board of Trustees, spoke on "Present Day Trends at the College." Mrs. William Peeke (Dorothy Gaskins '38), was general chairman of the luncheon, which was attended by seventy-one alumnae.

Mrs. J. S. Williams (Annie Meade Michaux '96), oldest alumna in Buncombe County, Mrs. J. Franklin Williams (Jocelyn McDowell '22) and Mrs. T. A. Groce, Jr. (Marguerite Overall '26) presented the guests to the receiving line, which was composed of Mrs. Henry Ausband (Frances Bryant '44), vice-chairman, Laura Cline '41, secretary, Mrs. Albert Lathrop (Virginia Terrell '23), Mr. and Mrs. George Stephens, and Dr. Graham. Mrs. Ausband presided at the luncheon in the absence of Mrs. Victor Workman (Frances Wertz '33), chairman. Dr. Embree Blackard, pastor of Central Methodist Church, gave the invocation, and the College Song was led by Mrs. Carl Whitehurst (Gail Tennent '48), with piano accompaniment by Mrs. Carter Preslar (Daisy Tucker '28). Miss Cynthia Mendenhall '43, contralto, sang several selections during the luncheon. Special guests were introduced by Mrs. Albert Lathrop.

Officers were elected for the coming year: Laura Cline '41, chairman; Virginia (Connor) Dysart '40, vice-chairman, and Dorothy (Kanipe) Hyatt '40, secretary and treasurer. Members of the Advisory Committee for the chapter will be: Frances (Wertz) Workman, Virginia (Terrell) Lathrop, Bobbie (Holland) Metcalf '39, Marguerite (Wiley) Bilbro '16, and Ethel (Bollinger) Keiger '13.

The college colors, yellow and white were very effectively carried out in decorations and programs, using college seals and pennants, as well as flowers. Alumnae in addition to those mentioned, who assisted with tickets, telephoning, and decorations included: Alice (Harold) Lee '24, Dorothy (Seifert) Talman '29, Camilla (Rhyne) Bainbridge, class of '25, Ruth (Mendenhall) Burton '33, Helen (Lichtenfels) Gumpert, '33, Virginia O'Shaughnessy '29, Ruth (Beam)

Carpenter '27, Edith (Murphy) Fisher, Marguerite (McDowell) Morgan, class of '18, Helen (Howerton) Lineberry '40, Priscilla Roetzel '43, Ruth (English) Sevier '26, Dacia Lewis '47, Hazel (Braxton) Curtwright, Frances (Hayman) Brown '33, Dorothy (Kanipe) Hyatt '40, Ruth (McKaughan) Carter '32.

Burke County

"Forgotten Men of American History" was the delightful subject of Dr. W. C. Jackson, former Chancellor of Woman's College, at the Burke County alumnae dinner, April 25, at the Community House in Morganton. Miss Nellie Wheeler '31, chairman, presided. Other guests from the College were Mrs. Anne (Fulton) Carter '21, counselor in Cotten Hall, who spoke informally about progress and plans at Woman's College, and Frances Butler '48, counselor in Kirkland Hall.

Dr. Jackson was introduced by Mrs. Jack Kirksey (Barbara Latham '45), and Mrs. W. S. Hamilton (Irma Lee Graves, class of '37) gave the invocation.

Chicago, Ill.

On Friday evening, May 4, Woman's College alumnae in the Chicago area met at the International House on the University of Chicago campus, with Dr. Ruth Collings, college physician, special guest. Those present included: Margaret Davidson '27, Helen (Sams) Sappington '43, Doris (Braswell) Sweetland '46, Dimitra George '46, Zoe Swecker '46, and Peggy Coppala '50.

The group thoroughly enjoyed seeing Dr. Collings and hearing first-hand information about the college. Zoe Swecker arranged for the meeting.

Columbia, S. C.

The Columbia, S. C., Chapter of the Woman's College Alumnae Association had a picnic in May for alumnae, families, and friends. This was the final meeting of the year. Newly elected officers are: Serena (Riser) Clark '43, chairman; Lucille (Sharpe) Long '32, vice-chairman; Lillyan (Miller) Smith '38, secretary-treasurer. Carolyn (Willis) Cunningham is outgoing chairman.

Delaware Chapter

The Delaware Alumnae had a luncheon meeting November 11, 1950. Twelve members were present and heard a delightful as well as stimulating talk by Judge Thomas Herliby, Jr., of the municipal court. Dorothy (Levis) Munroe '44 is chairman of the group.

A social meeting was held in April, with nine members attending, and plans were made for a summer meeting and the election of new officers. The meeting was held at the home of Ellen (Magill) Moyer '41.

Phyllis (Keister) Schaefer '39,
Secretary

Forsyth All- University Rally

Three hundred alumni and alumnae of Forsyth County gathered in Reynolds Auditorium in Winston-Salem for an All-University Rally Thursday, May 24, at 8 p. m. President Gordon Gray made the main address. Special guests from Woman's College included Chancellor E. K. Graham, Dean Katherine Taylor and Betty B. Jester, Alumnae Secretary.

Mr. J. T. Barnes, president of the Forsyth County Alumni of U. N. C., was in general charge of the gathering and Bishop Howard Rondthaler was master of ceremonies. Music was furnished by the high school orchestra and entertainment offered by Representative Jo King and his wife. Greetings were extended from Woman's College by the Chancellor. Representatives from State College and U. N. C. as well as officials of the city of Winston were on the stage.

Mrs. Bryce Parker (Eugenia Delaney '31), chairman of the Woman's College Forsyth Chapter, assisted Mr. Barnes with plans for the program.

Gainesville, Fla.

Margaret (Hannah) Leavitt '31 was hostess to the Gainesville Alumnae at her home on May 24. Mary Walker '30, chairman, was in charge of the business session.

Ruth (Peacock) Shaw, class of '44, was chosen to act as chairman of the group until the new officers take over in the Fall, as Mary Walker planned to leave in June for a year in Germany. Margaret Weeks '33 was elected chairman for the coming year.

A social hour was enjoyed and the group appreciated the hospitality shown them by their hostess.

Mecklenburg County

Dr. Marc Friedlaender, professor of English at Woman's College, was the guest speaker at the Spring meeting of the Mecklenburg Alumnae Chapter April 26, in the Normandy Room of Chez Montet in Charlotte, with thirty-three alumnae attending. Miss Nancy Ledbetter '44, chairman, presided, at the dinner and Eleanor (Fokes) Redding '43 gave the invocation.

Officers elected for the coming year are: Nancy (Kirby) West '44, vice-chairman; Doris Knox '43, treasurer; Eleanor (Fokes) Redding '43, scholarship chairman; and Margaret (Martin) Graham '24, social chairman. Miss Ledbetter retains the office of chairman another year as does Allene Grier '45, secretary. The nominating committee was composed of Mary Stewart Barnhardt '49, Mae (Duckworth) Hope '42, and Kate (Morgan) Squires. During the business session the announcement was made that the bridge group had presented $50 to the Mecklenburg Scholarship Fund, which has been sent to the College to assist a student from that county.

Dr. Friedlaender was introduced by Nancy (Kirby) West '44, and made a most enjoyable informal talk on the General Education Program at the College and the physical changes on the campus. He most graciously answered many questions on us about various matters, including information about favorite professors, the Social Science Forum, and the Arts Forum. It was a most enjoyable evening and we adjourned after singing the College Song, accompanied by Betty (Walker) Shuford '42.

Allen Grier '45, Secretary.

Mecklenburg All- University Supper

Alumni and alumnae of the three units of the University with husbands and wives as guests enjoyed a speech by President Gordon Gray at Latta Park, Charlotte, Monday, June 18. About 175 attended.

Miami, Fla.

The Miami Chapter of the Woman's College Alumnae Association met May 9, 1951, at the Antilla Hotel in Coral Gables.

We enjoyed a delicious turkey dinner with all the trimmings, plus an enjoyable evening of fellowship. There were fourteen alumnae present: Clara (Applewhite) Allen '35; Margaret Brown '45 vice-chairman; Bessie (Powell) Carter '41; Frances Chaille; Mary Jane Clay '46; Betty Jane (Sarratt) Cowan '46; Jean (Faulconer) Droke '41; Grace (Hamme) Jester '35; secretary-treasurer; "Lynn" (Hutcheson) Lewis '50; Margaret McCollum; Mary Byrd (McGowan) Pitts '31; Virginia (Lee) Rebalko '41; Katherine (Yoder) Scharrer '22; and Sue Willmott '46, chairman.

We all had a grand time, and can hardly wait for the next meeting, which will probably be held in August.

Grace (Hamme) Jester '35,
Secretary-Treasurer.

Nash-Edgecombe Counties

Alumnae of Nash and Edgecombe Counties enjoyed a banquet in the Red Room of the Ricks Hotel, Monday, May 21, with Dr. Lyda Gordon Shivers, professor of sociology, and Miss Elizabeth Hathaway, of the home economics faculty, as special guests from the College. Mrs. Marshall Barney (Mary Swett '35), chairman, presided over the group of twenty-five alumnae.

At the business meeting officers were chosen for the coming year: Scott Tyree '44, chairman; Carolyn Lehman '44, vice-chairman; and Dorothy (Toler) Hawkins '38, secretary-treasurer. Outgoing officers are: Mary (Swett) Barney '35, chairman; Mary Etta Pearsall '49, vice-chairman; and Susan Dawson '49, secretary-treasurer.

An introduction by Mary Etta Pearsall preceded an interesting account of the progress of the college through the past year by Dr. Shivers. A resume of the inauguration of President Gray and news about Dr. E. K. Graham, new chancellor of Woman's College along with accomplishments of faculty members and alumnae were brought to mind. The speaker pointed out the various physical as well as academic changes which have occurred and which are contemplated. Several reels of movies depicting events of interest at the college were shown and commented on by Miss Hathaway and Dr. Shivers. Susan (Dawson) Sterken '49, Secretary.

New Hanover County

Woman's College students from New Hanover County, those who were in school this past year and those who anticipate coming to Woman's College next fall, were special guests at a tea at the home of Eloise (Robinson) Cherry, class of '40, June 5. The Alumnae Chapter of New Hanover County sponsored the affair. Mrs. Lawrence Rose (Nancy Smith '41) is chairman of the chapter.

Pasquotank County

Alumnae in Pasquotank, Camden, Currituck, Perquimans, and Chowan Counties attended a banquet April 26, at the Virginia Dare Hotel, Elizabeth City, with Miss Katherine Taylor, Dean of Women, and Betty Brown Jester, Alumnae Secretary, as special guests.

Following an introduction by Camilla (Griffin) Herlevich '45, chairman, Miss Taylor gave an interesting talk on the growth and development of the Woman's College. She told the group that much is heard concerning the physical changes at the college, but that even more important is the growth and acceptance of the idea of a need for a core of general education for women. Miss Taylor concluded her remarks with the statement that Woman's College does not desire to become a pale imitation of some other college, but rather to be the Woman's College of the South.

The banquet opened with the invocation by Mrs. W. W. Finlator (Mary Elizabeth Purvis '39) after which the president welcomed the 42 persons present and thanked those who had worked in preparation for the banquet.

An informal period was held during which time each person present introduced the person to her right.

As part of the entertainment Mrs. Clay Ferebee sang two numbers accompanied at the piano by Mrs. A. R. Echerd (Sarah Hodgkin '45). Mrs. Jester, Alumnae Secretary, then brought greetings from the college and showed movies of the campus and 1950 commencement exercises.

The meeting closed with the group singing the last stanza of the College Song.

Richmond, Va.

The Richmond Chapter of The Woman's College Alumnae Association met May 16, 1951, in the conference room of the Westover Hills Theater. The meeting was called to order by the president, Dot Nelms, '46. Newly elected officers are: Barbara Apostolacus '49, president; Louise (Highsmith) Wilkerson '46, vice-president; Grace (Harriman) Morrison '37, secretary-treasurer.

Mary Henri (Robinson) Peterson '32, program chairman, arranged "Alumnae Presents." Pat (Shreve) Ruffin '31, told of her trips to Bermuda with seniors from St. Catherine's School. Grace (Harriman) Morrison described her trip to Europe in 1949. Barbara Apostolacus told of her flight to Paris, Easter week, 1951. We saw color pictures, taken by Barbara, and were all spellbound by her visits to various designers' studios. We then adjourned for light refreshments and much conversation.

Grace (Harriman) Morrison '37

Richmond, Va., Luncheon

During the Music Conference in Richmond, Va., April 18, sixteen Woman's College Alumnae enjoyed lunch with three Woman's College faculty members who were attending the conference, Miss Birdie Holloway, Mrs. Claire (Henley) Atkinson '16, both of the Music faculty, and Miss Grace Van Dyke More, who retired from teaching two years ago but is still very active in music and Woman's College activities.

Those present at the luncheon were: Marion (Floyd) Harrah '35, Mildred Doub '28, Ann Royster '50, Louise Birchett '50, Mary Ann (White) Harriman '49, Hilda (Weil) Wallerstein '26, Marguerite (Boles) Ramey '34, Jane (Rash) Matthews '40, Carmen (Frye) Richardson '29, Dot Nelms '46, Grace (Harriman) Morrison '37, Rora (Jones) Little '29, Barbara Apostolacus '49, Mary Henri (Robinson) Peterson '32, and Janet (Bachman) White '50.

Wake County

Alumnae of Woman's College in Wake County enjoyed a dinner meeting on May 23 at the S. & W. Cafeteria, in Raleigh.

During the business meeting, presided over by chairman Menefee (Bennett) Little '43, it was announced that funds were available for a Wake County Scholarship Fund for the coming year. The alumnae take great pride in aiding a Woman's College student.

The nominating committee announced the election of the following officers for a two-year period: chairman, Maribelle (Guin) Farlow '42; vice-chairman, Sarah (Hall) Jordan '40. Lane Siler '43 was re-elected to serve another term as secretary, and Dorothy Ward '41 will continue as treasurer.

Entertainment was furnished by Mr. Tom Adams, Raleigh lawyer and magician.

Lane Siler, Secretary.

Wilson County

At the meeting of the Wilson County Alumnae, held Friday, April 27, in the social room of the Methodist Church, Wilson, the following officers were elected for the coming year: Chairman, Sarah (Moss) Clark '46; vice-chairman, Lynette (Swain) Moss '15; secretary-treasurer, Dorothea (Tomlinson) Barbee '40. Dean Katherine Taylor and Betty B. Jester, Alumnae Secretary, were special guests from the College.

The retiring chairman, Margaret (Abbitt) Goodwin '35, was in charge of the business session.

Alumnae Chapters Send Scholarships

Four Alumnae Chapters have sent scholarship contributions to the college recently totaling $250, according to Mrs. Kathleen Hawkins, Student Aid Officer. Wake County sent $100 and Mecklenburg, Randolph, and Atlanta, Ga., sent $50 each.

These chapters are to be congratulated on these funds. The student who receives the scholarship is worthy of the gift, and no greater investment in the future of Woman's College and the State can be made than in the education of a young woman.

The chapters, in having a scholarship project, benefit also in that they are working together for a definite purpose.

Woman's College is grateful to the individuals who contributed and to the chapter officers who worked valiantly to raise the scholarship.

Thomasville Alumnae Sponsor Visit By High School Students

Forty-five junior and senior girls from Thomasville High School visited the campus Monday, April 23, under the sponsorship of the Thomasville Alumnae Chapter, of which Miss Ila Hensley '27, is chairman.

The group arrived at 2 p.m., and were met at the Alumnae House by Thomasville Woman's College students who took them to their residence halls, to the New Library, Home Economics and Physical Education Buildings, where a variety of activities were in progress.

After the tour of the campus, they returned to the Alumnae House for refreshments and heard brief talks by Dean Katherine Taylor; Miss Mildred Newton, director of admissions; Mrs. E. K. Graham, wife of the Chancellor; C. W. Phillips, public relations director; and Nancy Blanton '51, president of the Student Government Association. Members of Golden Chain assisted with serving and hosting.

Washington, D. C., All-University Dinner

Alumnae and alumni of Woman's College, State College, and the University of North Carolina held an all-university dinner meeting on June 1, in the Crystal Room of the Willard Hotel, in Washington, D. C. The occasion was to honor Gordon Gray, president of the Consolidated University.

There are many ways in which you who are leaving college can be valuable workers in a time of National Emergency. The Army, the Navy, the Air Force now offer women direct service of many types and are presenting their claims as forcefully as possible. The Government in Washington has opened practically every office and level of employment to women who are possessed of the needed skills. At present, and in the discernible future, the chances of allying one's self with the defense effort appear almost limitless.

Another category of employment is work in private industry of essential importance to the defense effort. You may remember only dimly that many women became draftsmen and riveters, radar experts and automobile mechanics during world war II. In 1951 women are being welcomed back into the factories. There is some likelihood that pressure may even be exerted to obtain voluntary enlistment of the womanpower of the country in the armed services or in the related defense industries. You must be prepared to consider the claims that will be made upon you from this direction.

But it is too soon to tell how the appeal to aid in the national emergency will be presented to you, and not knowing exactly what the appeal will be, makes it hard to weigh direct service in the defense effort against other jobs which may be open. When the time comes, each of you must make an independent decision since no one else will be in possession of all the facts that may be elements in that decision. Certainly any outsider can be of assistance only in pointing out some general considerations: Considerations which may have the significance that a compass has for the mariner—an indication of the direction in which he may travel but no suggestion as to what the destination should be.

If I am to fulfill even partially the hope I expressed that I might give you something of value on this day when you have completed an important chapter in your life it must be in pointing out some general directions that should influence you in choosing a job even in a time of National Emergency. A moment ago I asked the question that you might also ask, "why not take the job that carries the highest pay, help meet the country's need and at the same time earn enough to save for the future?" I implied that the answer might well lead to services in the armed forces or employment in defense industry. For some of you this will certainly be the right answer and there will, I trust, be valuable experience ahead of you as well as the satisfaction of proving yourself a useful citizen. If you see this line as clearly the one you should follow your decision will undoubtedly meet with public approbation and you can proceed with confidence.

My attention, however, is focused upon those of you who have been preparing quite specifically for work of different nature, not directly linked with the defense effort but of paramount importance for the continuance and preservation of our peacetime society. I am thinking particularly of those who are ready to be teachers, journalists, dietitians, musicians, social workers. If you are sincerely interested in the profession for which you have trained don't let anyone or anything dissuade you at this time from carrying out your original intention. True, you will not share in the high wages which are being used as inducements to draw women into work not ordinarily open to them (and apt to be barred to them again in the future). And you may even be considered unadventurous or unpatriotic as compared with those who identify themselves with government or defense jobs. Some people will probably say that you are more interested in your career than in the needs of the country, but I hope you will persevere and follow your own convictions.

There has never been a time, I am sure, when it was so necessary to point out the value of a humanitarian and intellectual basis for our common life. It follows that the need for those who profess and live such a philosophy is overwhelmingly great. Yet this need is not recognized as we recognize the need of technical skill in our materialistic society by the tangible rewards of high income, prestige and power. In fact, I must admit to you whom I urge to enter professions for the good of society that your satisfactions will in all probability not be of material nature.

How has it come about that a commencement speaker is hesitant in making an appeal to the idealism of youth? Aren't the young college graduates of today like those of the past? Haven't they equal vitality, self confidence and the desire for a good life? My own experience over a period of thirty years' work in colleges is that we are steadily improving the intellectual and physical quality of our young people. The lack in them of which I am conscious is the lack in the society in which we live—a real relief in the worthwhileness of a life devoted to intellectual and spiritual aims.

A few generations ago the uneducated as well as the educated in America had great respect for men of learning. Because they spent their lives in pursuit of the truth and in making explicit to others what they had found to be true, they were recognized as leaders in public life and as men to rely upon in shaping the policy of a democratic country. Today we still have valuable leaders who are men of learning—your own university of North Carolina has given us Frank Graham for leadership in national and international affairs, and if we had more Frank Grahams the problems we are facing today would not seem so formidable. Yet my contention is that we do not use our men and women of high intellectual attainment as effectively as we might, that there is actually distrust of the intellectual approach to the problems which face us. The only way to combat this tendency is to change the attitude of the public, and you can help to do this whether you marry immediately after college or whether you are a professional woman.

I wonder if you agree with this statement about the anti-intellectualism of the times? Many people would challenge me since they assume that the tremendous growth of facilities for high school and college education must mean a strong belief in intellectual values. Certainly the presence of such a large proportion of our population in educational institutions should mean that educators are given an opportunity to influence the thinking of young people at the time of their lives when they are supposedly most accessible to new ideas. And if educators have more opportunities than ever before to influence people's thinking, doesn't their failure to achieve desired results confirm common opinion that they are an ineffective group, that they either haven't any ideas of value to communicate or don't know how to communicate them? If this is the attitude, then educators may be compared to that French revolutionist who said: "The mob is in the street. I must find out where they are going for I am their leader."

I do admit that we who are educators are subject to criticism in having allowed the philosophy prevailing in the outer world to sweep into our educational institutions and to a large extent to determine what we have offered our students. Too many concessions have been made to the practical and to that which is regarded as immediately useful. I am not quarreling with vocational education nor do I disparage training of any kind which will lead to useful employment, but I wish to take a positive stand in favor of learning for learning's sake—what has been favorably known to scholars as the pursuit of knowledge. This has had honorable recognition in the past and, while the majority of people had no taste for a life devoted to learning, they were willing to accord respect to those who did. You will remember that it was Chaucer who long ago said, "and gladly would he learn and gladly teach." Of course, the respect has never in any age taken the form of rewarding teachers adequately in any material way. It was also Chaucer who said, "they have a hollow look and a threadbare cape." Yet in even the fairly recent past I think men of ideas fared better than at present in commanding esteem and some degree of understanding.

A number of years ago one of the profoundest thinkers of our times—Albert Schweitzer—wrote in his book, Aus Meinen Leben Und Denken, "I find myself in complete contradiction with the spirit of the times because it is filled with contempt for thought . . . not only with contempt but with distrust . . . so the spirit of the times does not mourn; rather it rejoices in the fact that thinking appears to be unequal to its task. It gives no credit for what thinking has already accomplished notwithstanding all its shortcomings. It fails to acknowledge the obvious fact that all spiritual progress has been the work of thought. It is unwilling to consider that thought may achieve in the future what it has failed to achieve in the past."

This is a pessimistic picture and you may say, "Oh, well, Schweitzer is a European and has seen terrible things happen to the mind and spirit of men both in Germany and France. It isn't that bad in America."

Certainly America is different from Europe and we shall not, I trust, see our intellectual life shattered as that of many European countries has been; but there is real danger in the indifference and hostility now shown to ideas and those who are interested in ideas. In case you do not know exactly what I mean, I shall cite three recent instances where public distrust of ideas reveals the degree to which anti-intellectualism is at work.

Since our difficulties with Russia have become acute, many appear to be convinced that any person who has ever given any consideration to Communism is suspect.

Now people who are interested in expanding human knowledge are not accustomed to being told that they should not examine any and all ideas. Accordingly some people have studied what Communism stands for and have explained its doctrines either to their students or to others. As we are committed to combatting Communism, it certainly behooves us to find out what strengths and weaknesses we face. To the inflamed imagination of certain congressmen and some private citizens, however, men and women who refer to the writings of Karl Marx or any other writer upon Communism are encouraging seditious thought. The textbook inquiries instigated by the house committee on un-American activities is a case in point. The requirement imposed by the Board of Regents of the State of California that members of the faculties of the University swear that they are not now or never have been members of the Communist Party is another.

Such tactics bring home the fact that there is little understanding or respect for thought. In college we seek to train our students to work with ideas of all kinds, to distinguish between the true and the false, not to fear exposure to ideas but to reject those that are unsound. Certainly if we have given you a true picture of Democracy we have nothing to fear from the ideology of Communism. Our interest is to discover the truth, and surely the truth about Communism is not going to win adherents among American college students. An undercover, outlawed student organization is much more likely than the classroom to create communist sympathizers.

My second instance of anti-intellectualism is already called "The Pasadena Case." The record of what happened here has general significance. When the Superintendent of Schools and the members of the Board proposed an increased tax levy, they were defeated by a citizens' vote. The campaign was highly revealing of the reactionary temper of our times and the forces at work in these days of uncertainty and fear. The Superintendent was a man of outstanding reputation and enthusiastically supported by the Board until the adverse citizens' vote on a tax increase. Later his resignation was requested after bitter attacks by the Pasadena unit of pro-America and others who claimed he was associated with the "Columbia Cult of progressive Educators." Those who believe in tolerance and rational discussion of public matters must stir themselves and realize the danger of a passive attitude before such attacks. There should be in every community a continuing citizen's committee devoted to the welfare of the schools—like the committees now being encouraged by the National Citizens Commission for the Public Schools.

The third instance of anti-intellectualism is one that I shall merely mention, although it is perhaps the most far-reaching and significant. Congress has cut the appropriation of the Voice of America to $8,000,000, an amount less than certain commercial programs pay for half an hour once a week for a season on one network! Perhaps this is politics rather than prejudice, but it appears to indicate slight reliance upon words and ideas as compared with material in presenting America's cause. If the present programs aren't effective, instead of throttling the Voice of America altogether shouldn't we work to make them more effective?

To return to your personal problems and responsibilities as you go out today from the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, I wish to emphasize the part you can play in upholding liberalism, freedom of thought, and the value of the search for truth in a period when intellectual ideals and those who promote them enjoy small public confidence and esteem. I urge you to take positions where you will be in the forefront of those who stand firmly for the intellectual and spiritual values of life and who realize that molding the thought of man may be the most important as well as the noblest job that can fall to your lot. If the values in which we believe are to survive, the individual who can think straight must shoulder much of the burden of making them survive. The distinction which has often been made between the market place and the cloister, between the hurly-burly of the life of the world and the retired, contemplative spirit of the wise man or woman has sometimes led to false assumptions, but it has expressed a partial truth—a partial, but also an important truth. It has been the function of men and women of learning in the past, and it will become increasingly their function to act as the preservers of the wisdom of the ages, to act as the inculators of reason, discipline and morality, and the creators of a sphere of human activity where men and women can lift themselves above the battle so that they may view it, however briefly, in the aspect of eternity.

N. C. and The Southern Tradition

faced with courage the most terrifying experience of all—the terror of uncertainty as to the outcome of the venture on which their lives depended.

Second is the element of independence. North Carolina has its share of what Carl Becker has called "the Americans bedamned-to-you spirit." Years ago it found its way into our folk speech—"root hog or die poor," "rich man's war and poor man's fight," "first at Bethel, furthest at Gettysburg, last at Appomattox," and many another. First in the entire country to establish a State University, first of the southern states to abolish the poll tax as a qualification for voting, we have been independent of other states south or north in working out our own destiny. The following habit of the sheep has not been a part of us. On more than one occasion we have played the role of the ram that leads the flock—and it seems quite in order to point out here the happy accident that the mascot of the capstone of our public school system, our State University, is a handsome, self-sufficient, and highly independent ram.

Another element strong in our tradition is idealism. We pay a lot of attention to the dreams of the fathers. The dream of Governor Morehead for the care of the mentally afflicted may not have yet reached its full flower, but it is the spirit of the dream that has brought into being our accomplishments in medical care and social service. There are the dreams of Aycock, Melver, Alderman, J. Y. Joyner, Josephus Daniels, Walter Hines Page, E. C. Brooks, and many others in education; the dreams of men like Bassett, Judge Walter Clark, Kilgo, and more recently, O. Max Gardner, for the freedom of thought and the right to express freely those effervescent opinions that crop up as signs of a healthy state of soul among independent people.

Then there is the element of progress. From the time that Governor Morehead and Calvin Graves led the fight for the North Carolina Railroad, down to the present time, we have committed ourselves to progress in communications and transportation. Our high dams at Aquone, Fontana, Glenville, Hiwassee in the west; Badin, High Rock, Hydro, Blewett Falls, and Mountain Island in the Piedmont; and Bridgewater, Rhodiss, and Catawba attest the fact that our potential of electric power is being developed and that we are using it. We are pressing forward our farm and home programs and our extension services reaching into every corner of the State, our schools and our colleges, our manufactures and our marketing, our building and urban development programs. Good roads bring to our magnificent recreation areas and parks both our own people and visitors from all parts of the country. We accept as a natural responsibility the cultivation of the mighty resources of our State in order that all who live here may share in the good life.

We also have a tradition of being practical—practical in the sense that we avoid sentimentality and emotionalism as guides for action, and in the sense that logic and our sense of values are brought to bear in our ultimate decisions. In the days preceding "the irrepressible conflict," recognizing that the future of North Carolina was bound up with the future of the Union, we refused to let ourselves be stamped by the emotional outbursts of the Fire-Eaters, and resisted secession until we were confronted with the practical necessity of making common cause with the other southern states. Throughout our history, we have been a practical people.

Finally, there is the tradition of faith: faith in our God, in our sense of values, in our future, and in ourselves. This element in our tradition permeates the lives of the great men of our past. It circumscribes and gives substance and focus to all of the other elements in our tradition.

Coming back home again to North Carolina after sixteen years in the comparative outer darkness, I get the impression that our tradition is in robust good health. At first glance, of course, there is an impression that we are unusually disturbed over social issues and more contentious than is our custom. None of this is surprising. Our history is full of fractiousness. My own people in the Cape Fear Valley were involved during the Revolution in sharp differences involving loyalty to the King and loyalty to the cause of independence. The history of Reconstruction in this State is the history of contentions among North Carolinians of different points of view, as well as the history of contentions among North Carolinians of different races. Most of us remember the fight over the Poole Bill, which followed in the wake of the Scopes Trial in Tennessee. Then from time to time, someone has discovered that our colleges had Karl Marx in their libraries, and in the resultant uproar students discovered for the first time that Karl Marx was in the libraries, and also, to their great disappointment, that he was one of the dullest authors of all time. An occasional speaker or labor leader would upset some of us momentarily, but our general reaction has usually been that there is plenty of room in this state for divergency of ideas. While he was Governor, O. Max Gardner pointed this out to alarmists so bluntly that even alarmists could understand.

We are going through one of our periods of controversy right now. The political tempo of the times generally, and particularly in our own State, is on the wild and stormy side. Controversy is simply a part of the history of any people who, by their tradition, are courageous and independent. That the controversy in our time centers in the question of North Carolinians of all races living amicably together hardly justifies the extreme anxieties that it seems to have produced in some quarters. At least, it should not produce these anxieties if we approach the problem realistically and with a firm determination not to waste an undue amount of adrenalin in working toward its solution.

To approach the problem realistically, we have to take a look at certain obstinate facts. First of all, we may accept, without becoming excited about it, that differences in point of view are always sharp in times of crisis, and nowhere sharper than in the area of social and economic thinking. On the whole, the controversies resolve themselves into a line-up on the one hand of those who think that their interests lie in resisting change, and those who think that their interests lie in seeing that change comes about. In respect to education, those who think that their interests would best be served by effecting a change in the established pattern of education in the South have carried their desire for a change into the courts in a series of suits involving both our public schools and our institutions of higher learning.

While a variety of motives have been ascribed to the plaintiffs, and to the people allegedly behind the plaintiffs, and to the people who are responding to the suits, I do not believe that this business of ascribing ulterior motive gets us anywhere. I should assume that the Negro as parent, or as student, looking at the situation as he finds it, simply thinks that his interests would best be served by effecting change. The respondents, charged with administering our institutions within the established policies and procedures of the State on behalf of their school boards, or their trustees, and on behalf of the People of North Carolina, simply believe that they are carrying forward their duties in resisting the change desired.

It is important to understand what our policies and procedures are in respect to the education of Negroes within the North Carolina tradition. Here is Governor Aycock's interpretation written in 1901, which we have attempted to follow to the utmost of our resources:

" . . . We are in this State in the midst of an educational revival. We favor universal education and intend to accomplish it. If our friends in the North, earnest men and women, choose to aid us in our work we shall receive their aid with gratitude. If they withhold assistance we shall nevertheless do the work which lies before us. We need help, but we can do the work unaided, and will rather than humiliate ourselves . . . As to the Negro, we shall do our full duty to him. We are willing to receive aid for his education, but without aid we shall in the long run teach him. He is with us to stay. His destiny and ours are so interwoven that we cannot lift ourselves up without at the same time lifting him. What we want of the Northern people of right thought and upright intention, more than all their money, is a frank recognition of this undeniable fact, and we will do the rest."

And listen to J. Y. Joyner in his first biennial report as Superintendent of Public Instruction under Governor Aycock: "The obligation of the State for the education of the child is the same, whether the child be wrapped in a white skin or a black one."

The State has moved in good conscience toward achieving this aim of equality. This has been done in equalizing the length of the school term, the teacher-pupil allotment in elementary and high schools, the course of study from grades 1 — 12, the regulations for accreditation, the program of training and certification of teachers, the salaries of teachers and principals, and the evaluation of high schools. The number of one-teacher schools for Negroes was reduced between 1914 and 1948 from 1,934 to 511, the number of schools employing more than four teachers in the same period has become 446. One thousand and fifty-two busses transported 60,000 Negro children in 1948-49. Accredited high schools have increased within the past thirty years from 6 to 185. In the past 25 years, the value of public schools for Negro children has increased from 7 million to 21 million dollars.

In 1941-43 the biennial appropriation for state Negro colleges, for maintenance, was $621,000. In 1947-49 it was $1,795,610. Even more important, there has been a constant upgrading in standards of professional excellence, in plant and facilities, in libraries and laboratories, and in expanded courses of study and staff.

These figures from the Office of Public Instruction, which could be extended at length, and which would undoubtedly be more impressive for the present biennium, are offered simply for what bearing they may have on the way that the State has attempted to fulfill the dream of Aycock and Joyner.

We have carried forward our program of public education with a commitment to the principle that facilities for the education of whites and Negroes shall be separate and equal. That we have not yet achieved equality in all respects understandably fails to satisfy some of our people. The controversy between those who would place the emphasis on separation, and those who hold that there can be no equality as long as separation exists, frequently generates more heat than light, and we may reasonably have some concern about the possibility that emotion may take over the function of intelligence. This could be a real danger, and one which should cause everybody a lot more anxiety than the threat of either change or lack of change.

Never in history has there been a time when it was more important for all Americans to achieve a firm basis for working together than right now. This obligation rests with particular emphasis upon Americans of different races, because it is here that elements of disunion are beginning to assert themselves. Take, for example, the recent exchange between Governor James F. Byrnes and Dr. Ralph Bunche. This exchange has been hotly argued on the merit of what Mr. Byrnes said on the one hand, and on the merit of what Dr. Bunche said on the other. The tragedy is that these things were said at all. I take it that when Mr. Byrnes stated that the termination of segregation in our public schools in the South would close the schools, he was stating what was, in his personal opinion, a fact. Dr. Bunche, in characterizing Mr. Byrnes as a "bitter-ender," was stating what was, in his personal opinion, a fact. Without going into the discretion of either of these great and devoted Americans in respect to these particular utterances, I am sure we should all agree that the contribution of Mr. Byrnes and Dr. Bunche was negative in so far as it brought us any closer to the solution of our problem.

We are committed against arbitrary methods as a device of changing public opinion, for we know that the way people think is not a matter for legislation. And given wide divergence of thought, we cannot reasonably expect acceptance of radical change in social custom by legislative device. Public education in North Carolina, for all our people, has prospered with the consent of the governed, a consent joyfully given within our tradition. But the consent of the governed has preceded the support.

My present judgment happens to be that the policy of separate and equal public education is in the interest of our State and in the interest of the South, in the interest of our schools and colleges, in the interest of all our people of all our races. I do not propose, however, to let myself get upset because someone else thinks differently. I take it all of us here tonight are agreed on the point that the more serious the issue, the greater the necessity for keeping our emotional balance, our sense of humor, and our perspective, in good working order.

As Southerners, as North Carolinians, as parents, and as teachers, we have a very clear duty imposed upon us by the partnership of our tradition to do all that is within our power to make this land of ours a better place to live in for all who live here. I should like to suggest an approach which conceivably may be translated into terms of understanding and agreement, based on commitment to our traditional values. We have spoken too long in generalities and relied too heavily upon emotional response which has no strength to carry over to the level of action. These are my proposals:

1. Consistent with our tradition of courage, that we meet head on our problems of living together, learning together, and working together.

The Trustees of the highest level of our public school system, the University of North Carolina, have recently given us a striking example of this realistic approach. If we intend to hold to the Aycock premise that we shall do our full duty to the Negro, that we recognize that his destiny and ours are so interwoven that we cannot lift ourselves up without at the same time lifting him, then let us undertake a scrupulous evaluation of all of our educational resources for all of our people. Let us then look toward translating the spirit of our tradition into practice, and, above all, let us make sure that we do what we say that we are doing. This is clearly our obligation, as pointed out to us in the position of President Gray and the Trustees in the recently announced policy of providing equality of opportunity on a competitive basis in respect to graduate and professional education.

2. Consistent with our tradition of independence, that we rigorously cultivate equanimity and maturity in the discussion of racial issues, that we avoid emotional involvement by the extremists, the Fire-Eaters of 1951.

Here above all, good will, interest, and understanding on the part of all North Carolinians is of the essence. It is doubtful if any people in history—at least any people short of the Salem witch-hunters—ever took themselves with such grim seriousness as do many of those on both sides of the present controversy. This grim seriousness will get us nowhere, except to a fine state of mass anxiety. And anxiety leads to loss of balance, loss of perspective, loss of a sense of values, and eventually but surely to loss of the independence and freedom that have been at the heart of the Southern Tradition.

3. Consistent with our tradition of idealism, that we concede to those of opinions different from our own the dignity and the presumption of honorable intention which they deserve.

If we recognize with Governor Aycock, that every North Carolinian of every race has a vital stake in the welfare of all other North Carolinians of all other races, then in times like these we need not "send to know for whom the bell tolls." Neither do we have to worry about the particular motives of particular individuals who hold views contrary to our own. What we have to do is to make an evaluation of the views themselves to determine whether or not proposals which spring from these views will make for a greater happiness and opportunity for all North Carolinians.

4. Consistent with our tradition of progress, that we make our schools for whites and our schools for Negroes equally better, the economic position of all of our teachers equally better; and let us be prepared to bear the cost of equality if we are sincere in our commitment to equality.

5. Consistent with our tradition of being practical, that we establish effective communication among all people of good will who may not now be in agreement but who are genuinely interested in the welfare of North Carolina.

As a specific move in this direction, I should like to propose that the North Carolina Parent-Teacher Association, the State Office of Public Instruction, our institutions of higher learning, and other agencies vitally concerned, consider the advisability of establishing once more The Conference on Southern Education. Exactly fifty years ago, on April 18, 1901 here in Winston-Salem, at the Fourth Annual Conference on Southern Education, Governor Aycock and his colleagues attacked with telling effect the problem with which we are concerned this evening. The Conference was held between 1897 and 1914, and revived briefly some twenty-five years ago. A conference of this sort, on either a state or a regional basis, whichever is more practical to effect, ought to provide an excellent starting point for bringing light and air into a situation which is badly in need of both.

6. Consistent with our tradition of faith, that we look to our tradition and measure our successes and our shortcomings in terms of the values which we hold as North Carolinians, as Southerners, as Americans.

Making North Carolina and the South, within our resources, the best place for our people to live cannot be accomplished by grimness, by aggressive and uncritical presupposition of right, by weeping over what has not yet been done, by pointing the finger of blame, or by any amount of breast-beating under the Confederate or Northern banner. It can be accelerated by realistic presentation of accomplishment, by counting our gains, by accentuating the positive, by giving North Carolinians of all races an opportunity to see ourselves in the perspective of our achievements together, by giving our faith in our future a chance to assert itself over our fears.

I suppose that at this point, after having talked so frankly on the issue generally regarded as the most delicate in our State today, I ought to quote Herodotus: "Now may gods and heroes not be displeased with me that I have said thus much about these matters."

Our families and our children—the families, the children, and the schools of all our people of all our races—are the heart of our State and the heart of the South. The State and the South are in turn a part of our great nation. In these days of 1951 we cannot afford bitterness and recrimination, and we cannot afford the spirit of secession. These must be the days of American union if our children, our families, our schools, and our freedom are to survive. This involves a commitment and a dedication that is very old indeed.

It was 2400 years ago that the democracy of Athens, the citadel of freedom and democracy in the ancient world, completed its first war against the totalitarian State of Sparta, which represented Military force and dictatorship as its way of life. This was the commitment that the Athenian leader Pericles envisaged for the Athenians in his funeral oration for the Athenian soldiers who had died in the first war against Spartan totalitarianism, as the free citizens of Athens prepared for their final struggle with the forces of darkness:

"Fix your eyes upon the greatness of your country as you have it before you day by day, fall in love with her, and when you feel her great, remember that her greatness was won by men with courage, with knowledge of their duty, and with a sense of honor in action, who, even if they failed in some venture, would not think of depriving their country of their powers but laid them at her feet as their fairest offering."

Mr. Friday Is Named Assistant to Mr. Gray

William C. Friday has been named by President Gordon Gray as Assistant to the President in the Office of the Consolidated University of North Carolina. He assumed his new office April 16, 1951.

A native of Dallas, N. C., Mr. Friday graduated in 1941 from State College, saw service as an officer in the Navy during World War II and in 1948 received his law degree from U.N.C. His wife, the former Ida Howell of Lumberton, graduated from Meredith in 1941, received her Master of Public Health from U.N.C. in 1947 and until August 1, 1951 was an instructor in the U.N.C. School of Public Health.

At the meeting of the Woman's College Board of Trustees, Friday, May 25, Mr. Friday presented tentative plans for the alumnae annual giving program as a part of the College Development Program.

Reunion Class of 1911

Ten of us were on the campus by 11:00 a.m., Saturday, May 26. We met in the Alumnae House which, by the way, some of us had never seen; and since I've been back so many times and spent practically every weekend there while my daughter was in college, I took great pleasure and pride in showing them over the building and the campus.

We enjoyed our lunch together in the dining hall of our own Old Spencer and were most pleased to have a table reserved for us with our class numerals in red and white on it.

After lunch we drove out to Beatrice Schwab's lovely home in Irving Park and there we really had our reminiscing session—I had carried letters from my classmates who were unable to come and these were read.

The supper served in the Alumnae House was unusually fine and was so well arranged. We saw many contemporaries there.

That night the play was superbly done; and after the play, four of us talked most of the night.

My college chum and roommate, Olivia (Burbage) Campbell, Myrtle (Johnston) Hassell, Catherine (Jones) Pearce and I stayed over for Sunday, but the others left Saturday night.

Those of us attending were Myrtle (Johnston) Hassell, Edith (Latham) Settan, May (Vickery) Faucett, Mae (Brown) Terry, Margaret (Pickett) Hamlin, Natalie Nunn, Catherine (Jones) Pearce, Beatrice (Schwab) Weil, Olivia (Burbage) Campbell, and Bertha (Daniel) Cloyd.

We were impressed by our Alma Mater's progress. She's really had her face lifted; she's been massaged and manicured, and we highly approve.

We decided to make our reunion an annual affair. Look for us in '52.

Bertha (Daniel) Cloyd.

Mary Elizabeth (Green) Matthews writes from Thomasville: "I am continuing in my seventh year as librarian in the Thomasville Library, a branch of the Davidson County Public Library. My fourth grandchild, Marianna Matthews, the daughter of my son Roger and his wife, Jackie, who live in Greensboro, arrived April 11. She has a brother, Hardin, who is two and a half. The other two grandchildren are Janet Newsome 5, and Paige 3, the daughters of Susannah (Matthews) Newsome '44, who lives nearby in Thomasville and are a great pleasure."

Margaret (Smith) Davis lives in Edenton. She has one son, Dr. J. W. Davis, Jr., who is a pediatrician in New Bern.

Anne Albright, who retired last year as Dean of Women at Western Carolina Teachers College, writes: "This has been a good year for me and I heartily recommend retirement for those who are tired from working. I have enjoyed several visits with my family and college classmates. I am busily engaged in a landscaping project here at the old home in Waynesville, plain dirt gardening, getting into the tourist business and enjoying my friends."

1917

Everlasting President
Mrs. F. I. Rypins

Class of 1916 Reunion

In the Colonial Room of Bliss' Restaurant, the Class of 1916 of the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina held its 35th reunion. Ten sixteeners and their guests gathered around a large table beautifully decorated with large nosegays of Parma violets, arranged by Lucy (Hatch) Brooks, and a handsome centerpiece of purple and white canterbury bells, arranged by Mrs. Julius Foust (Clara McNeill, Class of '12) as a tribute to our class, to relive their college experiences and to exchange information about their activities during the last 35 years. Place cards hand done by Octavia (Jordan) Perry were beautiful and dainty, featuring violets and dates 1916-1951.

Honor guest was Mrs. J. I. Foust, wife of the late president of the College. Ten years ago, on the occasion of their 25th reunion, Dr. and Mrs. Foust entertained members of the Class of 1916 at a lovely dinner at Sedgefield Inn. Other guests were Georgia (Hatch) Wilson, sister of Lucy (Hatch) Brooks, Margaret (Willis) Alexander, class of 1915, and Nancy (Funderburk) Wells '49, daughter of Annie (Beam) Funderburk, who served as "reporter" for the reunion.

Annie (Spainhour) Walker, everlasting president, said the blessing, after which Annie (Beam) Funderburk, everlasting secretary, read greetings and messages from the absent members. She also had for the enjoyment of the group, the complete class record books for the years 1912 through 1916. Many of the class songs and yells were carefully preserved, most of them in the handwriting of Sarah (Gwynn) Dininny.

Each member of the class discussed her own life since the occasion of their meeting in 1941.

Starting at the right of Mrs. Foust, the reports sounded like this:

Marguerite (Wiley) Bilbro—Marguerite lost her husband about three years ago. She is living in Asheville and is teaching the first grade. She and two friends in similar conditions have built little houses together in Asheville. Called "Widow's Row", the little settlement has brought her and her friends a great deal of pleasure. She led the singing of the class songs and was most loyal with her large Adelpian Society pin on her dress.

Janie Ipock—Janie is still teaching math in the Goldsboro High School. She said that she lives a normal school teacher's life, has a nice apartment and enjoys her nieces and their children. She has recently put on a state National Honor Society Convention, and Sarah Gwyn said that Janie was known as "one of the best math teachers in the state." During the last few summers, Janie has enjoyed selling Comptons.

Lucy (Hatch) Brooks—Lucy says that she is the errand boy for her family in Burlington. She was on the way to Davidson College for the graduation of her son, Ralph. Next year he plans to go to medical school. Lucy's daughter, Margaret, does social work in Alamance County. Lucy furnished the lovely nosegays of Violets.

Anna (Doggett) Doggett—Anna prides herself on the fact that she has never missed a reunion of the Class of 1916. She has been living in Princeton, W. Va., for the last 8 years, and has recently bought a house there. Her son, Wesley, is now dating at W.C., and her other son, Luman, Jr., is working in Virginia with the railroad.

Sarah (Gwynn) Dininny—Sarah had lots of good news of herself and her family. She is teaching math in the Leaksville High School and loving it. Her husband is the advertising manager of the Leaksville News. She told about "Sister's" (Mary Gwynn) camp in the mountains of North Carolina, Gay Valley. Sarah looked mighty handsome in her purple dress.

Annie (Spainhour) Walker—Annie was able to give interesting news of her family and of many absent members of the class. Her oldest daughter, Ann Vernon, is living next door to her in Morganton, where her husband is city attorney. Ann works in the bank there. The younger daughter, Susan, is now the medical librarian at Grace Hospital in Morganton. Annie also told of her niece, Lettie Hamlett Rogers, of the Woman's College English faculty, who has published two books, South of Heaven and Storm Cloud, were recommended for parallel reading to the members of the class.

Claire (Henley) Atkisson—Claire is now teaching piano at Woman's College. Her husband is in the hospital at Greensboro, but is doing nicely. Claire said that she had ended up at W.C., where she had started.

Mattie (McArthur) Dunn—Mattie has been living in Washington, D. C., since 1928. Prior to this she had taught math and loved it. She is now working for the Navy Department, and according to one member of the class, is "boss of a whole lot of men". She expressed special pleasure at being present for the reunion.

Pauline (Williams) Koonce—Pauline is celebrating her 25th wedding anniversary this year. She has been living in the same house with the same husband for all these years! Her elder son, Marvin, graduated from the University last year and is in business with his father in Raleigh. The second son, Calvin, is now a senior at the University and is enlisted in the Navy training program. He will graduate this year with the rank of ensign and serve a hitch in the Navy.

Annie (Beam) Funderburk—Annie Beam was getting ready to sail for France on May 29. She is planning summer study in Paris. Now teaching French full-time at the Woman's College, she has enjoyed the house which she has bought on McIver Street, near the College. Her only daughter, Nancy Beam, received a master's degree in history at the University last year and is now married and living in Burlington where her husband is an engineer with Burlington Mills.

Sadie (McBrayer) McCain—Sadie appeared at Bliss' just after the reunion had broken up. She was so sorry to miss seeing most of the members of her class. But her activities had been pretty well covered even though she was absent. Sadie is now Dean of Women at Flora Macdonald College. This summer she is flying to Scotland for the summer, to study at the University of Edinburgh. Her three daughters, Sarah Louise, Irene, and Jane Todd are married and her son, John Lewis, is in his second year of medical school at the University of Virginia. Sadie was on her way to the baptism of her younger granddaughter in Leaksville.

The deepest sympathy of the class goes out to Ruth (Tate) Anderson (Mrs. W. L.), 629 Oaklawn Avenue, Winston-Salem, who lost her husband this year. Also to Jay (McIver) Hester (Mrs. Frank), 2216 Belveder St., Charlotte, N. C., whose husband died in March of a heart attack, and who, two days after Frank's death, fell and broke her hip. She hopes to walk by Fall. This was the first reunion Jay has missed and her absence was keenly felt.

After the calling of the class roll, and the accounting for absent members, the sixteeners joined in their class song. Dr. Wade R. Brown, late head of the music department at the College, might have objected to the pitch and the cracks in voices, but no one could deny that the Class of 1916 did have the spirit and comradeship that make an outstanding class. The Parma violets were carefully put away for the occasion of the 50th Reunion!

Everlasting President

Mrs. W. B. Richardson

(Marie Lineberger)

244 Maple Ave., Reidsville, N. C.

Louise Black teaches English at the senior high school in Fayetteville. She is also faculty adviser to the school annual.

Esther (Clapp) Jones writes from her home at Red Oak: "I was thrilled with a visit some time ago from Lola (Phillips) Waller '18, who is a proud grandmother. After teaching for over 30 years, Carrie Cranford '18 is now Mrs. I. F. Craven and makes her home in Ramseur. Inabelle Coleman '18 is one of our famous members for her teaching here and in Shanghai, China."

Margaret (Matthews) Raiford teaches fourth grade in Erwin. The Raifords have five children—Anne Raiford '49, who taught at Whiteville last year and is now spending the summer with her parents; Claude, who is with the Medical Group at Tyndall Air Force Base in Florida; Philip, who is with the Basic Military Training Group, Lackland Air Force Base, San Antonio, Texas; Margaret, a high school senior, who is spending her second summer assisting with the Kanuga Camps, and attending conferences; and their youngest child, Bob, expects to enter high school at Fork Union Military Academy, Va., in the fall.

Laura (Wiley) Lewis is doing graduate work in creative writing at the Woman's College. One of her stories, "The Fuddling Cup" was published in the summer issue of Corradi. "This was a story written for Mr. Robie Macauley's Short Story Workshop which I highly recommend to any other alumnae interested in creative writing, as a rejuvenating, stimulating and most worthwhile experience."

Everlasting President
 Marjorie Craig
 Brevard College, Brevard, N. C.

Sara (All) Abernethy is teaching music in New Bern. One of her piano students entered the State Music Contest in Greensboro in the Spring. Her other chief interest has been the building of new apartments to add to her home, and the beautifying of her yard and garden.

Mary (Bradley) Thompson teaches Latin and algebra in the high school at Lowell.

Sallie Greenfield, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Greenfield (Annie Lee Singletary), of Kernersville, is one of 73 girls from the United States and foreign countries who has been selected to attend the International Girl Scout Encampment this summer at Portland, Ore. This is one of the highest honors ever given in Girl Scouting. The encampment will be held at the Wind Mountain Camp in Portland from July 17 to August 6.

1920

Everlasting President
 Natalie Coffey
 711 McCulloch Street
 Raleigh, N. C.

Natalie Coffey, everlasting president of the Class of 1920, sends in the following information on members of the class:

Mary Winn (Abernethy) Fowlkes is now living at 3322 Park Avenue, Richmond 21, Va.

Isabel (Ardrey) Gray lives in Clinton. She lost her oldest son in an automobile accident. Her second son is a college freshman.

Mabel (Boysworth) Moore lives in Tallahassee, Fla., where her husband is Dean of the School of Social Welfare at Florida State University. Mabel is connected with the Girl Scout organization, Woman's Club, and P.-T.A.

Catherine (Cobb) Smoot lives in Tarboro, where her husband is a cotton merchant. Catherine has a son, a daughter, and two granddaughters.

Rouse (Hayes) Steele's second daughter was married last June. Rouse and her family live in Burlington.

Terene Holleman served as president of the Anson County N.C.E.A. this past year.

REUNION, CLASS OF 1918

Class of 1918 Reunion

Thirty-three years after graduation, eight members of the Class of 1918 returned to the College for a reunion.

There was a placard with 1918 and a sketch of a middy blouse and a pair of high top shoes on it, standing expectantly by the registrar's desk. I held this sign high so that the 1918'ers would see me; otherwise, they might have passed me by. Actually, some members of the class had to be introduced to each other. What with gray hair, bifocals and wrinkles and extra pounds, we didn't look like the girls of 1918!

Mary (Moyle) Montgomery, Carrie (Cranford) Craven, Mary Dosier, Laura Sumner, Margaret (Matthews) Raiford, Kate (Hunt) Kirkman, Bessie Brandt (Brown) Denny, and I had the reunion luncheon in South Dining Hall. As the eight of us sat around the table, we told of our families and ourselves and showed pictures of children and grandchildren. We also had a picture made of the group.

After lunch we had a pleasant, private session in the little library of Alumnae House, where we called the roll, read letters from absent members and looked at ourselves as Juniors in the 1917 Annual. You remember we had no year book in 1918 because of the war.

Some information we learned from letters and conversation is as follows:

Mary (Moyle) Montgomery is living and teaching in Salisbury and has one son.

Kate (Hunt) Kirkman and Margaret (Matthews) Raiford each has five children. Both Kate and Margaret are still teaching school and look as if the profession agrees with them.

Carrie (Cranford) Craven said "life began at 50 for me" when she was married 3 years ago.

Mary Dosier and Laura Sumner are both teaching, each in her home town.

Bessie Brandt (Brown) Denny is the wife of Judge Denny of North Carolina Supreme Court. She has 3 daughters and a son. Her youngest daughter Jean, is a rising Junior at W. C. Betty graduated in 1947 and Sarah (Denny) Williamson in 1949. Her son is a lawyer in Durham.

Marie (Lineberger) Richardson has a daughter at W.C., and a son at the University of New Mexico.

Leone (Blanchard) Stockard had planned to attend the reunion, but had to go to the beach for her health.

Because of illness in the family, Susan (Green) Finch was kept at home. She lives in Thomasville.

Susie (Brady) Brown lives in Richmond, Va.; Kate (Brooks) Pond has 2 children and 3 grandchildren. She lives in McLean, Va.

Laura Linn (Wiley) Lewis' son was graduated from Davidson in June.

Thelma Mallard is teaching in Columbia, S. C.

Louise Black is a teacher in the schools of Fayetteville.

Nancy (Porter) Kirby lives in Charlotte and has 2 married children and 3 grandchildren. Her youngest son is married and is a law student at Duke.

Dorothy (Phelps) Bultman lives in Sumter, S. C., and has 2 married children. 1 grandchild, and a younger son who received his master's degree in architecture from Yale in June.

Bertie (Craig) Smith lives in Richmond, Va. She has a son at the University of Virginia. Bertie holds a position with the State Library.

Martha (Blakeney) Hodges was in Germany with her husband and son for almost a year, but is now back in this Country.

Lula Disosway is a doctor in Alaska. Seventy-eight were in our class; twenty have not married, yet; six have passed away—Alice Presson, Madelyn Thompson, Leafy Spear, Mary Walker, Alice Marrow and Mary Gordon.

Our getting together at the College was an inspiration to all of us. Do return at your first opportunity and get the thrill that we did. It's a real tonic to visit Alma Mater.

Marie (Lineberger) Richardson,
 Everlasting President.

Josephine Hopkins is still teaching. A volume of the school annual was dedicated to her last year. Her home is Brown Summit.

Marguerite (Jenkins) Morrow's daughter, Tiny, was inducted into Phi Beta Kappa at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, last year. She is planning to do graduate work in mathematics this Fall. Tiny was also a member of the May Queen's Court. Marguerite's son, who teaches at the University of North Carolina, was married in December.

Jimmie Jones teaches 5th grade in the Durham City Schools. She spends her vacations traveling, having spent one summer in Europe, and has also visited the Western part of the United States.

Juanita (Kesler) Henry is doing a great deal of community work in her home town, Salisbury. She is executive director of the Community Chest, serves as chairman of committees in various organizations, among which are, the Woman's Club, the American Legion Auxiliary, the Altrusa Club, Alumnae Chapter, and her church.

Elizabeth Smith is working as an engineering draftsman with the Bureau of Public Roads in Washington, D. C.

Winnie (Smith) McKinney's second son, Claude, was recently taken into Phi Beta Kappa at the University of North Carolina, where he was graduated in June. Her oldest son, George, received his M.A. degree in dramatics at the University in June 1951.

Carrie (Tabor) Stevens, of Council, has three children and one grandchild. She helped organize the Bladen County Welfare Board. She has been on the Presbyterial Board of the Wilmington Presbytery for seven years. The Federation of Home Demonstration Clubs claimed her services for three years. Carrie was a member of the committee which made plans for consolidating the three branches of the Greater University of North Carolina.

Everlasting President

Mrs. C. Parker Poole
(Mildred Barrington)
Fort Bragg Rd., Fayetteville, N. C.

Mary Sue (Weaver) Allison teaches at the Lindley Elementary School in Greensboro. Her daughter, Sarah Long (Allison) Hubbard, class of '49, graduated from William and Mary in 1949 and is now a technician at Presbyterian Hospital in Charlotte, where she and her husband are making their home.

Everlasting President

Mrs. H. C. Lassing, Jr.
(Frances Singleton)
702 Fair Avenue
Fountain City, Tenn.

Anne (Cantrell) White, society editor of the Greensboro Daily News, recently wrote: "I am going to Mexico City the last of July for three weeks with my sister, Jean Smith (Cantrell) Rankin, class of '35, whose husband, Forney A. Rankin of the State Dept., is counselor of public affairs for the American Embassy. The Rankins, including four little redheads—three boys and one girl—went to Mexico in January from Washington."

The Board of Directors of the North Carolina Parents and Teachers named a 1951 committee on Civil Defense, to help mold a civilian defense program in America in cooperation with local, state and national agencies. Helen Dunn (Creasy) Hunter was named as a member of the committee.

Edith Earle (Cunningham) Boesser and her family live in Richmond, Va. They have one son, a rising junior at Thomas Jefferson High School, who is in cadet corps, and is also in the high school band. Mr. Boesser is secretary and operations manager of the Universal Motor Company in Richmond. During World War II, he served as a major in charge of the motorized equipment with the 96th Infantry Division and spent two years in the Pacific Area. During his absence, Edith Earle taught school. She is now active in Red Cross, club and church activities, and declares that her chief hobby is gardening.

Everlasting President

Mrs. A. H. Lathrop
(Virginia Terrell)
4 Woodlink Road, Asheville, N. C.

Nell (Craig) Strowd writes from Chapel Hill: "Lady of Leisure" is the most untruthful term I know of. Since "retiring" I believe I have been busier than ever before in a very busy life. Besides maintaining our country home, caring for a yard that grows each season, I seem to have become a club woman—against my will. I have just completed the publicity on the promotional work for National Mental Health Week for the local Altrusa Club." Nell is also doing publicity work for the Chapel Hill and North Carolina Garden Clubs.

Miriam F. Goodwin joined the American Red Cross in May 1950 as recruitment secretary for the Tucson Chapter in the Southern Arizona Regional Blood Center.

Mary Teresa (Peacock) Douglas is serving as a consultant this summer for a school library workshop at Central Washington College of Education. During the Summer of 1950 she was consultant for a school library workshop at the University of Southern California at Los Angeles. At the end of the school session, Mr. Douglas joined her and they toured the Pacific Northwest and Canadian Rockies.

1924

Everlasting President

Mrs. J. C. Kesler
(Ethel Royal)

Winston-Salem, N. C.

Alice (Harrold) Lee and her family live in Asheville. "Our daughter, Betsy, member of the sophomore class at Woman's, was chairman of the Daisy Chain for commencement. Julia Ross Lambert '51, daughter of Julia (Ross) Lambert '24, was class day chairman, the two worked together on Class Day—a rather interesting coincidence."

Elizabeth (Naylor) Valentine teaches English and social studies at Carr Junior High School in Durham.

Everlasting President

Mrs. John E. Bridgers, Jr.
(Elizabeth Duffy)
1412 West Lake Drive
Greensboro, N. C.

The address of Elizabeth (Duffy) Bridgers, delivered as president of the Southern Society for Philosophy and Psychology at the meeting with Vanderbilt University as host, was published in the January 1951 issue of the Psychological Review, under the title of "The Concept of Energy Mobilization."

Elizabeth (Martin) Elam and her husband have moved into their new home on Elam Avenue in Greensboro. "Our son is doing a fine job as second year law student at Chapel Hill and we have the sweetest three-year-old grandson."

Pauline Roberts is a nurse at Leahi Hospital, Honolulu, T. H. "In January 1946, I came here for a year's experience and liked my work and this delightful climate so well I decided to remain here indefinitely. In 1949 I returned to the States for a vacation, but mainly to attend my sister's graduation from medical school. This happy event was followed by a three months' tour of Western Europe, including the Scandinavian countries and England. The tour was conducted by one who had lived in Europe and he spared no effort in showing us many places of historical interest, usually overlooked by many tourists. I have recently made a delightful tour of Japan, having gone especially to attend the Cherry Blossom Festival, held the first two weeks in April."

Margaret Rowlett has written an article, which has been accepted by Look Magazine, entitled, "Now It's Our Turn," as a reply to a story, "How Teachers Make Children Neurotic," which the magazine carried some time ago. Margaret spent the summer at Nantucket and among her guests were Marjorie Hood '26 and Pauline (Tarleton) Ellis '26 of Greensboro.

Maxine (Taylor) Fountain finished her term in July as president of the Christian Women's Fellowship, Hill-yer Memorial Christian Church, Raleigh. "I am now making our daughter Marcia's first long dress for her first music recital."

Everlasting President

Mrs. George Eichhorn
(Hermene Warlick)
1115 Briarcliff Road
Greensboro, N. C.

Louise (Ballard) Wynne writes from Gibsonville: "I lack four months completing my quarter of a century in the training 'human animal' field. The twenty-five years have been unusually short and pleasant, but I'm now ready to let some one else carry my torch. Without any exception, the W. C. girls (and I've taught with 13) always rank as top teachers, thanks to our Alma Mater. I've been married only seven years, have no children, and Dick is head of the billing department at Minneola Mfg. Co. here."

Julia (Blauvelt) McGrane writes from Jamaica, N. Y.: "I keep busy enough taking care of my house, husband, and two daughters, but I still do write poetry and have some of it published from time to time. The last was in Harpers in December 1949, or Jan. 1950. My older daughter, Joan, has just announced her engagement. They plan to marry as soon as she finishes Barnard, where she has completed her junior year. She is twenty. My other daughter, Patricia, is seventeen and has finished her junior year at Jamaica High School. This past week Katherine (Grantham) Rogers '26 and her husband and Fadean (Pleasants) Van Tassel '28 and her husband were here for dinner and we talked of N. C. and the coming reunion."

Elsie (Brame) Hunt, whose husband is a soil conservationist, lives on a dairy farm in Wilson County. They have two boys, Jimmy, aged 13, and Robert, aged 10. "We are much interested in Grange work and the opportunities it offers all ages of farm folks for better living. We attend each of the six Grange meetings in the six Granges in this county and often others in surrounding counties. I am a N. C. Grange Deputy. For two years I have served as the first woman member of the State Board of Health, having been appointed by Governor Scott."

Aylene (Edwards) Cooke of Durham is president of the Durham Chapter U. D. C., 1949-52; president Carr Jr. High P.-T.A., 1951-52; secretary Durham Needlework Guild since 1945; past president Y.W.C.A., 1947-49; member State Board Confederate Woman's Home, Fayetteville, N. C., (Governor's appointee for 1950-52); chairman of Magazine advertising of N. C. Division U. D. C., 1951-53; and member St. Philips's Episcopal Church. She has one son, 13 years old.

Ruth Fanning teaches mathematics at Lee Edwards High School, Asheville.

Sarah (Franklin) Brisker writes from Washington, D. C.: "After six years of club and organization work, including church and P.-T.A. activities, I have gone back to teaching and I love it. I am teaching commercial subjects at Taft Junior High School. I'm back for good, I think! I always enjoy getting the Alumnae News and reading about my dear old classmates. Three years ago I was in Greensboro and was so impressed with the changes in W. C., particularly the new library, in the construction stage then."

Mary Alice Gray of Cary works in the bookkeeping department of Baptist State Convention, Raleigh.

Sarah (Gulley) Raper moved from Lexington to Fayetteville four years ago. She has a 15-year-old son in senior high school and a 13-year-old daughter in junior high. Her husband is with Employment Security Commission and she is teaching the second grade.

Kate (Hall) Carlson of Bethesda, Md., writes: "My husband is a budget officer with the Defense Power Commission, Interior Dept. I am tutoring for the Remedial Education Association, being assigned this year to a private boys' school, where I am tutoring (and have one or two small remedial classes) remedial reading, spelling, arithmetic, and various subjects in lower and junior high school. I enjoy it all very much, but have lots of outside work to do—studying, lesson plans, seminars with my association, etc., and as I do all

REUNION, CLASS OF 1926

Class of '26 Holds
Twenty-fifth Reunion

Fifty-one members of the Class of 1926 held a warm, enthusiastic reunion in the private dining room of the Cafeteria in the Home Economics Building at Woman's College on Saturday, May 26, 1951, during Commencement.

They were joined by two former members of the Class, who had not graduated with it, and a member of the Class of '27.

Each 'twenty-sixer participated in the proceedings, responding to the reading of the Class Roll with news of themselves, their families, and/or jobs, and news of absent classmates. Telegrams and letters from a number of the absent members were read to bring their greetings.

Each 'twenty-sixer wore a nosegay of white flowers, tied with green ribbon bearing the numerals '26.

Special visitors included Chancellor Edward Kidder Graham, and Dean of Students Katherine Taylor, who came in for friendly greetings, and Sarah (Harrison) Lundeberg, who as class mascot had brought so much luck, most of it good!

Hilda (Weil) Wallerstein, who was president of the class at graduation time, added much pep and hilarity to the meeting by "modeling" the green jersey bearing '26 in white letters which she had worn during athletic events while in College.

Hermene (Warlick) Eichhorn, as class president, thanked all those responsible for the beauty, comfort, delicious lunch, floral arrangements and other factors adding to the enjoyment of the luncheon-reunion.

A reading of class statistics revealed that of the 262 graduates, 200 are married and 186 are now living in North Carolina. The others are located over most of the United States, and two of them live in foreign countries. These last are Nolie K. McDonald, A.P.C. Mission, Lubondai, Tshimbulu, Belgian Congo, Africa, and Annie Lula Marine (Mrs. P. H. Wilson), Garth Avenue, Sandy Bay, Hobart, Tasmania, Australia.

A note of sadness was brought by the announcement of the sudden death of Fred W. Terrell, husband of Mary Alice (Robertson) Terrell, of Ralceigh, approximately a week before the reunion. Mary Alice had planned to attend the reunion. A special message of sympathy was sent to her by those gathered for the reunion.

The names of ten members of the class who have graduated to the Fullest Life was read, followed by a moment of silent, loving remembrance of them. These are Ruth Ader (Mrs. Pierre Van Dyke), Evelyn Boyd, Francis Dickinson, Eva Eure (Mrs. W. E. McKenzie), Ora Finch (Mrs. W. S. Avant), Elizabeth Grossman (Mrs. R. C. Kesler), Ruth Hinnant, Marie De Vere Jones, Effie Meacham (Mrs. C. W. McCartha), and Mary Bailey Orr.

Election of officers returned Hermene Eichhorn as president, and Eleanor Vanneman (Benson) as secretary-treasurer. A reunion in the near-future was voted also.

The reunion closed with the singing of the class song.

Hermene Warlick Eichhorn,
President, Class of 1926.

my own housework and have a nice husband and nine-year-old son to look after, too, you can imagine I have little time left over for the amenities of life. I manage to practice music—flute, recorders, or piano—for an hour or so several times a week, but rarely have time to play chamber music with my friends, as I've been doing for several years. I hope for a better schedule next year. Then maybe I can pick up my other hobby again—puppets. For several years I have been giving hand puppet shows all around in this area—for fun to the little country schools for white and Negro children—for P.-T.A.'s in bigger schools, for a church fair, in libraries, and for private home parties. I make all my puppets and write all my plays and produce them alone, a one-man show. It is fun, and greatly rewarding in the appreciation of the children, but it isn't remunerative enough to take the place of a real job. I certainly don't want to give it up, however. It takes the place of the old dramatics work of my college and later days. My husband and son are both fanatical fishermen (fresh-water mountain streams for trout, and lakes for bass and sun fish), and tie their own flies for casting. They also collect stamps, moths, and butterflies. All of us read omnivorously; Carl and Andy draw, and I leave musical instruments all over the house. There is never a dull minute for any of us, and we have a grand time, wishing mainly for more time, as every day is too short." She is recovering from a major operation she had in February.

Annie Smith (Henderson) Cragan writes from Sanford: "My husband is administrator of Lee County Hospital and we have been living in Sanford about three years. We have two daughters at W. C. Ann graduated with the class of '51 and got her diploma on my 25th reunion. Jane is a member of the class of '53 and carried the Daisy Chain for her sister."

Johnsie (Henry) Cobb, Rock Hill, S. C., is supervisor of Physical Education at the Winthrop Training School. Her husband is manager of radio station WTYC, and they have three boys, George Jr., thirteen, Douglas, eight, and Charlie, five.

Marjorie Hood of the Woman's College Library writes: "After teaching school in the elementary schools of Salisbury for three years after graduation, in the summer of 1929 I came to the College to work in the Library for six weeks summer school. I have stayed twenty-two years except for the year 1935-1936 when I went to Library School at Emory University in Atlanta, Ga. I am now meeting daughters of our classmates at the circulation desk. My work is head of the circulation department. For two summers, 1945 and 1946, I worked in the New York Public Library, because I wanted to see what public library work is like. It is different and it's interesting, but I prefer the college girls." Marjorie attended the meeting in July in Chicago of the American Library Association and enjoyed especially seeing Mr. Guy Lyle former W. C. Librarian, now Librarian at L. S. U. In August she spent two weeks as guest of Margaret Rowlett '25 at her cottage at Nantucket.

Mary Clyde (Johnston) Clark writes: "I was married in Goldsboro, June 21, 1928, and moved to Worcester, Mass. My husband is junior executive with the Davis Press. His field is advertising in industrial publications and local business firms. We have two fine children, Carolyn, aged 17, and Robert 13. Carolyn is preparing to study music. This year, I was appointed as a member of the Massachusetts Division of the White House Committee on Education. Most interesting. Also, it is a pleasure to serve as a warden in my area. Let's pray we shall not have to use the instruction on atomic warfare!"

Inah (Kirkman) Carpenter writes from Lenoir: "Aside from family fun the biggest thing that happened to me in 1950 was being invited to be one of N. C.'s 54 delegates to attend the White House conference on children and youth. It was a wonderful experience."

Bess (Newton) Smith of Wilmington is president of the Cape Fear Garden Club, active in all Presbyterian Church work, and a member of the Board of Regents of Barium Home for Children. She has two boys, one at the University of North Carolina and one a sophomore in high school. She writes that she is as interested in bridge as in her college days.

Vivian (Peterson) Rhodes writes from 3210 Sunset Drive, Charlotte: "Our moving is news enough, because it's into a home of our own. Wonderful feeling—and it's about time!"

Mary (Polk) Gordon lives near the college on McIver Street. She has two boys, one a junior and one a sophomore at Curry Training School.

Kathryn (Price) Tiedeman writes from Silver Spring, Md.: "The teenage problem is with me now, and that, I suppose, is one ordeal we all go through but manage to survive! John Denby is 14 and Katrina is 12. I love living here in the thick of things, and I get to see many North Carolinians. I stay busier than a hive of bees—and much to the children's sorrow—my work is un-remunerative, as it is church, P.-T. A., A.A.U.W., etc. However, I do really enjoy most every minute of it."

Mary Alice (Robertson) Terrell was unable to attend the reunion luncheon because of the sudden death of her husband late in May. Mary Alice has been working with the State Department of Education in Raleigh for a number of years, and is very active in A.A.U.W., Y.W.C.A., Altrusa Club, Woman's Club, church auxiliary, book club and Little Theatre.

Vera (Rosemond) MacDonald of Greensboro is teaching social studies at Aycock Junior High School. Her son, 22, is a junior at the University of North Carolina. He was in service in the Navy two years before entering the University.

Thetis Shepherd is head of the commercial department at Peace College, Raleigh.

Virginia Elizabeth (Smith) Gibson writes from Montgomery, Ala.: "I am still a senior stenographer for the Sales Tax Division of the Alabama State Department of Revenue. We have a small apartment near where we work. My husband (U. N. C. '19, Columbia U. '21) is director of the Division of Public Health Education of the Alabama State Department of Health and does considerable writing in his spare time, mainly magazine articles. His first book, "Physician to the World, The Life of General William C. Gorgas," was published November 15 and has had a pleasant reception by the critics and public."

Ellen (Stone) Scott of Greensboro writes: "I have continued working in P.-T. A., having served in many capacities in the local association at Curry School and for several years have been on the Greensboro Council of P.-T. A. as program chairman and community service chairman. Next year I will be its first vice-president. I have just completed two years as assistant chairman of District No. 4 of P.-T. A., and have served as chairman of Parent Education at Senior High School this year. One 17-year-old son, Arthur, Jr., is a student at Senior High now after going to Curry all through Junior High. He plays a trumpet in the band and has been playing football and basketball. (He lost his front teeth in a football game.) Leona, our daughter, is a third year student at W. C. and is majoring in Home Economics with her chief interest in Nursery School."

Carrie McLean Taylor of Burlington writes: "I have taught primary children every year since graduation—in Burlington and Charlotte. Several summers I have taught education courses at Elon College. I received my master's degree at U. N. C. The summer of 1949 I renewed my graduate certificate at Columbia University and also saw "South Pacific." My hobby is sight-seeing and I count a summer lost if I can't go some new place. My latest acquisition is a bachelor apartment where I live alone and like it. My other hobby is collecting new recipes and trying them out on my friends."

Pearl (Teiser) Kahn writes from Raleigh: "For the last six years, I have been teaching business subjects (mainly) in the Millbrook High School. This is one of Wake County's consolidated schools just about five miles from the heart of the City of Raleigh. This is my first teaching experience, though not my first work experience. In the early years after graduation from college, I did office work (secretarial, etc.). I like teaching better. My husband is a radio engineer and we have one son, Bill, who will be eighteen years old next month. He is going to graduate from Needham Broughton this spring. Mary Sue (Beam) Fonville '23 was his eighth grade teacher and last year he was lucky enough to have Ella McDearmon '26 teach him chemistry. If the army doesn't get him first, he is going to attend State College this fall. I regret not having a daughter to send to W. C., but hope that one of my very best students will be enrolled there next year."

Eleanor (Vanneman) Benson of Greensboro has two children, Nancy, 18, a freshman at W. C., and Neil, 12. Her husband is vice-president and actuary of Pilot Life Insurance Co. Eleanor is secretary of the board of management of the Greensboro Youth Center, program director for the Conference of Christians and Jews in Greensboro, and president of the local League of Women Voters.

Addie Wilson of Asheville is taking care of her mother and semi-invalid brother.

Mary Elizabeth (Smith) Nolin writes from her home at Marlborough-Hudson, N. Y.: "After several years of ill health, it develops that my lifetime suspicions were well-founded—I'm allergic to 'dusting' at home. Not content with the round of home, church, school, and other activities, I yielded to the pleas of a friend on the contingent sales force at Luckey-Platt & Company Department Store in Poughkeepsie, to help during the Easter rush. All my illness evaporated; my family cheered up—and I find myself promoted to assistant floor manager. I enjoyed a visit to my parents in Raleigh and was happy that the time of the trip coincided with commencement dates at Woman's College. I enjoyed being on campus again."

Juanita Stott has recently been installed as president of the Post Matron's Club of Raleigh (Order of the Eastern Star) for 1951-52.

Zada (Wright) Fair and her family live in Gastonia. The Fairs have two children, Wade Van 13, a 7th grader, and Juanita Jeannine, who was graduated from the University of South Carolina in June. "For the past three years I have studied voice and found it a very pleasant and satisfying hobby. I keep busy with home duties, flower and vegetable gardens, along with P.-T.A., church and choir work. My husband is in the rental and property management business and builds houses as his hobby."

Everlasting President
Minnie Walker
Cabarrus County Hospital
Concord, N. C.

Margaret Elizabeth (Beam) Lins writes from Fort Pierce, Fla.: "At present I am recuperating from an appendectomy. Prior to that I was busy as finance chairman for the St. Lucie County Federation of Garden Circles. We have been raising funds for our new Garden Center, and we made our goal. I have also been ways and means chairman for our newly-formed Hospital Auxiliary. We put on a big Spring Festival and Home Talent Circus and raised approximately $2,000 for our work at the Ft. Pierce Memorial Hospital. My husband and I enjoy growing flowers as a hobby."

Betty (Ehringhaus) Tyson writes from Norfolk, Va.: "My husband and I took the South American cruise which was sponsored by a group of Norfolk business firms. The cruise was made on the 'S. S. Nieuw Amsterdam', departing from Norfolk January 6 and returning January 16. Our first port was Curacao, Netherlands, West Indies, spending a day in Willenstad, the capital of Curacao—a shopper's paradise! Next port of call was La Guaira, Venezuela, with a sight seeing trip to Caracas, the Venezuelan capital. The last stop was at Kingston, Jamaica, another wonderful place to shop. Then home—but what a wonderful ten days! Our little girl is 12 years old now and our son, Billy, is 7."

Mary Dewar, 2625 Weels Avenue, Raleigh, teaches second grade in the Fred A. Olds School.

Dorothy (Edwards) Summerrow lives in Gastonia. "Five children and a twelve room house should occupy all of my time, but I do a lot of writing on the side and have stacked up three cups in three consecutive years, all of them awarded by the State Federation of Women's Clubs. Beginning with the Lanier Cup in 1949 for the best one-act play, next was the Past President's Cup for the best short story in 1950, which I won again in 1951. Our oldest daughter will enter Duke University in the Fall. We have four daughters and one son. Tommy, the baby, will be two years old in July. Believe me, with all of this crowd we never settle down to bedlam! I am a member and past vice president of the North Carolina Poetry Society, a member of the Charlotte Writer's Club, and a member of the Carolina Dramatics Association."

Lois Jennings teaches at Union Grove School and lives at her home in Olin. Last summer she "enjoyed a wonderful vacation trip to Europe; spent two months touring England, France, Belgium, Holland, Switzerland, Luxembourg, and Italy. I was in Germany for the Passion Play and I stopped for a short visit in Barcelona, Spain, en route home. My trip was all that I had anticipated and much, much more. I went with a group of twenty-two people and we sailed on the 'Queen Elizabeth' and came back on the 'S. S. Atlantic' by the Mediterranean route which took ten days."

Frances (Faison) Johnson's husband is Associate Justice of the North Carolina State Supreme Court. They have three children, Frances Faison 13½, Mary Lily 11½, and Jeff III 10.

Sara (Henry) Smith still lives in Louisville, Ky. "I will be thinking of all the '31'ers and wishing I could get in on all the 'Do you remember' and the 'What's happened to so and so's—my best wishes to all. When Bill had a trip to Knoxville recently, David and I went too for a visit with Ila (Shields) Remine, class of '31. We had not seen each other since 1929 and it was grand to renew our friendship and to find that neither of us had changed a great deal. She has a grand family—husband and three interesting children. My brother and Helen Moxley, who has been assistant director of residence at Woman's College, will be married in July and we are looking forward to being in North Carolina for the wedding."

Jane Ermina (Johnson) Knowles wrote that she was sorry to miss the 20th reunion of the Class of 1931, but that they were moving into their new home on May 10 and sailing for a trip to Europe on May 26.

Rosa (Moore) Barham lives in Franklin, Va. "My husband and I have been living here since the Fall of 1940 and have fallen completely in love with this lovely Virginia town, which is, incidentally, the home of Betty (Steinhardt) Widmer '29. We have three children—Martha 11, Dick 7½, and Kate 3½. We have organized an alumnae chapter here and we were all happy to round up nearly twenty alumnae for our first meeting and hope others will join us."

Charlotte (Purcell) Tilley writes from Durham: "Last Christmas was the biggest of my life. I acquired a nice husband, a ready-made family of two daughters—Diana 12 and Kay 8½. After my many years as a teacher, I find that being a housewife is quite a change!"

Mary Elizabeth (Ratlidge) McCrary and her family live at 409 Summit Street, Greenville. "We have a daughter who graduated from high school in June and we had planned to send her to the Woman's College, but since we live so near the campus of Eastern Carolina Teachers College, she will enter here in the Fall."

Louise (Whittington) Smith lives at 1029 Churchill Road, Ft. Worth, Texas. "I certainly was sorry to miss our class reunion and I know every one enjoyed it. I am quite busy taking care of my flower garden and my two boys, Connie 4½ and Wally 2½. We're hoping that our sons will some day be students at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill."

Everlasting President

Mrs. R. L. D. Hood
(Avery McConnell)
Matthews, N. C.

Mary (Deese) Murray is teaching a seventh grade at the St. Stephen High School, near Hickory, where her husband is principal of the school.

Pansy Avery (McConnell) Hood writes from her home in Matthews: "Since 1946 my husband and I have given detention care at our home to the white boys of Mecklenburg County, under the custody of our Juvenile Court. We feel that jail care of juveniles is indefensible and that in every county in the nation families could be found to provide the necessary care we do. The load is wearisome to us at times—as tonight, when we have 10. Originally we expected no more than 2 at a time or 5 at the most. I do all the housework and have little else as my hobby or chief recreation."

F. Louise Robinson is director of Christian Education at West Market Street Methodist Church, Greensboro. She formerly taught at Myers Park School in Charlotte. She received her master's degree in religious education in 1948 from Scarritt College.

Class of 1931 Reunion

The Class of '31 had great fun celebrating the 20th anniversary of its graduation. Kate Robinson Farr entertained the early arrivals at a buffet supper at her home on Friday night. Entertainment during the evening centered around the Pine Needles of 1931.

Our reunion luncheon was held at the Greensboro Country Club. Places had been laid for 40, but 50 arrived. Ruth Abbott Clarke was reunion chairman and Kate Farr attractively arranged red and white flowers for the table. Dr. Ruth Collings, our honorary class member, was present. Personal anecdotes and experiences from every one enlivened the fun.

We were surprised that we could still sing "Long live old '31" so lustily. Louise Gorham Winstead played the accompaniment. Business was limited to a report from May Swan Stroud, our everlasting treasurer.

Among those present were: Mae (Ballard) Covington, Miriam (Block) Lubin, Patsy Braswell, Frances (Faison) Johnson, Mathilda (Geiger) Wolfe, Louise (Gorham) Winstead, Anita (Hobson) Reece, Dalice (Howard) Croom, Odessa (Hunter) Rayhill, Virginia (Johnson) Storey, Meta (Kellog) White, Edith (Kimsey) Benedict, Elizabeth (Lewis) Mims, Martha McGee, Margaret (McManus) King, Emily (Mellon) Smith, Ruth (Abbott) Clarke, Betty (Brown) Jester, Rosa Coit (Moore) Barham, Sallie Mooring, Katharine (Morgan) Kirkman, Mary Fowle (Perry) Vance, Lola (Profit) Davis, Charlotte (Purcell) Tilley, Augusta (Raymond) Britt, Kate (Robinson) Farr, Theo (Ruddock) Benfield, Annie Lee Singletary, Annie Lee (Thompson) Hutton, Henrietta Wallace, Mary Jane (Wharton) Sockwell, Nellie Wheeler, Helen (Hight) Davis, May (Swan) Stroud, Eva (Woosley) Warren, Eloise (Woosley) Cates, Evelyn H. They live in Lake City, Fla. "For the past two years I have been president of Nu Chapter in Florida of Delta Kappa Gamma. In February of this year I was initiated into Nu Epsilon Chapter of Sigma Tau Delta. One of my most interesting professional experiences occurred in 1950 when I served with six other people on the Florida Textbook Committee. For several years I have been active in our county education association, the Florida Education Association, and Florida Council of Teachers of English. I am also a member of the National Education Association. My husband and I are planning to adopt a baby this summer, which means that I probably won't be teaching for several years; however, I do plan to complete my twenty-five years, as we have a very good retirement system in Florida."

Anna (Atkinson) Martin wrote from 325 Alta Avenue, San Antonio, Texas, that she was sorry not to be able to attend the 1936 Class Reunion. The Martins have two children, Eddie 8 and Mary Anna 3. Anna is home-making. "Greetings to all the '36'ers."

Dorothy Ward is secretary to the head of Textile Chemistry and dyeing School of Textiles, North Carolina State College, Raleigh. "Ever since I can remember I have wanted to try ice skating, and I finally got my chance when an ice rink was opened at the Coliseum here. It's every bit as much fun as I thought it would be. A group of us recently formed a skating club and hope to become passable figure skaters. Skating is particularly nice in the summer, as it's nice and cool at the rink."

Virginia (Wells) Welch is living in Columbus, Ga., where her husband, Captain F. D. Welch, is assigned to the Post Engineers at Fort Benning. Their son, Donnie, is 4 years old.

Helen (Williams) Shumate's present address is 718 Holbrook Avenue, Danville, Va. She and her husband spent last year in France. "Our life in Paris was really wonderful, and

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson W. Gore (Betty Lou Moore '41), of Cedartown, Ga., are shown here with their children, Jefferson 3½, Annette 2½, and Josephine 1.

'Paris in the Spring' was just as lovely as I'd always thought. We spent two grand weeks in Spain and loved the people and the marvelous sun. It was like a dream come true for me to see the cities I'd read and studied about for so long. We also spent two weeks in England and then visited Switzerland, Belgium and Holland and came home on the 'Queen Elizabeth.' My husband will receive his Ph.D. degree in August and after that only Uncle Sam knows."

Carolyn (Wolfe) Ashcraft's husband was transferred from Raleigh to Nashville, Tenn., in September 1950, and they are now living at 1803 Shackleford Road, Nashville.

Class of 1941 Reunion

The Class of '41 tenth reunion exceeded our fondest hopes for a successful gathering. There were approximately forty-five members attending, besides a few who joined us from other classes. Beginning with the arrival of a goodly number on Friday night, May 25, there was an informal session into the early morning hours on first floor of Coit Hall. On Saturday and Sunday between scheduled events, there were many ooh's and ah's on tours of the newest residence hall, the new gymnasium, the new Library, the new Home Economics wing, the former site of Walker Avenue, et cet. Only seeing is believing!

The climax was the class luncheon in South dining hall, followed by adjournment to the parlor of Coit Hall where everyone, including Miss Shivers, mentioned briefly her own activities and those of anyone she knew not attending. It was a wonderful occasion. We were represented from Delaware to Puerto Rico in person and had greeting messages from Paris to Oklahoma. It was with no little pride that we heard news of some of our number who are making names for themselves (Margaret Coit, already a Pulitzer prizewinner, to mention only one).

Following the Alumnae Association business meeting, where the new Chancellor, Dr. Graham, spoke, we had a delightful time at the buffet supper with faculty friends in the Alumnae House.

Ordinarily a treat to see any one of the people you run into during such a weekend, it is impossible to describe the good feeling you have seeing so many old friends at one time. On parting our separate ways, there was mutual agreement, that class reunions are not to be missed! Please take heed, those unable to be present this time, and begin plans now to make the next reunion!

Elizabeth (Patten) Brafford
Everlasting President.

Everlasting President
Mrs. Samuel M. Hayworth
(Sue Murchison)
828 West Haven Blvd.
Rocky Mount, N. C.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Hope, Jr. (Mae Duckyworth), a second son, C. C. III, May 30, 1951, Charlotte.

Born to Dr. and Mrs. James Lamar Henson (Harriett Ann Hall), a third son, May 24, 1951, Sternberger Hospital, Greensboro. The Hensons have moved into their new house at 1508 Edgedale Road, Greensboro.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. George Isherwood (Faye Kornegay), a second son, William Thomas, June 15, 1951, Drexel Hill, Pa.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Holding, Jr. (Eleanor Pearce), a son, Herbert Spencer III, January 23, 1951, Wake Forest.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kennedy (Evelyn Rayle, com. '42), a son, James Edison, May 16, 1951, Greensboro.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. John Alden Clark (Mary Ann Scott), a son, Alden Lee, June 3, 1951, Waterville, Maine. "He is enjoying a very enthusiastic welcome from his sisters, Alice 7 and Evelyn 4."

Ruth (Butler) Bailey's husband is an agriculturist for North Carolina State College at McCullers Experiment Station, near Raleigh. Ruth is president of the Vance School P.-T. A. for 1951-52. They have two sons, Billy Butler 6, and Danny Bailey 2.

Mary Lucille (Cochrane) Ledbetter lives in Raleigh. She is a housewife and mother of two small daughters.

Elizabeth (duFour) Bliss writes from Nutley, N. J.: "In December 1950, my husband, young daughter and I moved to Nutley, from a six-room house to a twelve-room mansion. As of this writing I am still trying to adjust to all the space. We love it here and Welles is very busy in his new parish."

Beatrice (Goldman) Fisher is living in Anchorage, Alaska, where her husband, Major George Fisher, is Executive Officer, Alaska Engineer Depot, Elmendorf Air Force Base. "We have been here a year now and it is proving to be quite an experience, as we have moved four times so far. We just got notification to move into a brand new set of quarters by June 1st. After having lived in a two-room hut on a homestead, a 20-foot trailer at 55 below zero, and two other two-room apartments, a three-bedroom house with the last word in conveniences will seem wonderful. The only objections that we have to the territory is the deplorable lack of adequate housing, and the exorbitant prices. Realtors think nothing of asking $125 for a one-room log cabin, or shack without running water, and getting it. Fresh milk is 60¢ a quart, ice cream is $1 a quart, and hair cuts $1.50 each. Fortunately, the commissary and post exchange take care of most of our needs.

"The country here is really beautiful. Anchorage is in the Matanuska Valley at the head of the Cook Inlet, and about 150 miles from the Alaska Range. The mountains are breath-takingly beautiful and don't look real, but more like a scenic back-drop. The valley was colonized by the 'dust bowl' farmers, who were sent up in 1933 by President Roosevelt. Farming is highly successful because of the rich virgin soil and during the short growing season, the sun shines about 23 hours a day. The vegetables are double the size of those grown stateside. It's not unusual to see radishes the size of large beets.

"Anchorage is sometimes called 'the longest bar in the world' as there are rows of taverns and cocktail lounges in the downtown district. Yet, it's a very clean city with wide streets and the most modern buildings. There are no department stores, but a great many specialty shops, clothing stores, and gift shops which stock Alaskan art objects. Actually, there is no native art, as such, as the paintings, carved ivory and leatherwork is done by outsiders who have settled in the territory.

"I would really appreciate it if any of my classmates who are up here or will be coming up will get in touch with me. If they will call Major Fisher at the base, he will get the message to me, as telephones are just another one of the things we do without up here. We've two more years of this tour to complete, and Anchorage is a long distance from North Carolina and the 'outside' as the 'Sourdoughs' would say."

Memory (Johnson) McBride, com. '42, recently spent some time in Miami, Fla. with her sister, Margaret (Johnson) Bryan '44.

Ruth Leonard, a member of the Pennsylvania State College faculty, is director of a two-week workshop in the teaching of health and physical education at Mary Washington College of the University of Virginia.

Mary Elizabeth (Pillely) Eybers and her husband live at 27 W. 104th Street, Orangeburg, N. Y.: "I would be happy to hear from any W. C. alumnae who are living here."

Meredith (Riggsbee) Both writes from Durham: "Last year my husband and I, with our daughter, Donna Jonlyn, went out West to New Mexico to teach on one of the Indian Reservations. This work is very interesting and very profitable in adding to our experiences. Now my husband has returned to complete his M.A. degree at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill. In our city police department, there has been quite a turnover. The men have been taken from the office and put on active service outside. These vacancies have been filled by women and I am one of the lucky ones. I am clerk of the traffic division."

Willena Jay (Schoene) Keen and her husband are operating an antique shop in Malaga, N. J. "We moved into this big house last Fall and set up an antique shop. Betty Wenzel '42, my college roommate, was my first visitor. We have lots of room and am hoping more old friends will pay us a visit. There is a beautiful lake a block away and it's only twenty miles to Atlantic City."

Eberts Post, American Legion. Miriam, who was Rosie Moore in the original Broadway show, writes: "The changes from the original show were so few, the rehearsals so short, that it was possible to slip back into 'Rosie' with little effort."

Margie Gabriel teaches physical education at Senior High School, Greensboro.

Millie Sue Harrelson writes from Louisville, Ky.: "I returned March 11 of this year on the 'Queen Mary' from a two-months pleasure trip to Europe. While there, I toured Italy, Portugal, Sicily, Switzerland, France and England. The highlights of the trip were visits to the Isle of Capri, the French Riviera, and Monte Carlo."

Nell (Koonce) Skonberg's husband is lieutenant with the U. S. Navy and on May 31 they were sent to Honolulu. They have a daughter, Hilma Elizabeth, who was born February 12, 1951. "I hope to see some W. C. Alumnae while we are in Honolulu."

Está Frankie (Leonard) Draper writes that they have moved into their new home in Toledo, Ohio. "My parents have retired and have decided to settle in Greensboro, so I'll be visiting W. C. more often now."

Agnes (Pettit) Reily is living in El Paso, Texas, where her husband is stationed with the U. S. Navy. "We have a son, Jack Pettit, born August 22, 1950. Our daughter, Patricia, is 4. We hated to leave our home in Lake Charles, La., but we are finding El Paso different and interesting."

Ella Marie (Pinkston) Rodman and her family moved from Columbia, S. C., to Atlanta, Ga., on June 15.

Polly (Sargent) Simmons, class of '43, and her husband, Capt. Albert D. Simmons, are living in Louisiana, where he is stationed at Barksdale Air Force Base. "My husband pilots a RB-45 (jet, light bomber of recon.

Robert William II, 30 months old, and Miriam, 15 months old, children of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Roney (Miriam Day '43), of Little Rock, Arkansas.

type), and I find Air Force life to be very interesting. I would love to see any W. C. Alumnae who are in this section."

Margaret (Moss) Hodnett writes from Raleigh: "My husband, Tom, who is a graduate of State College, Raleigh, is in the cortisone plant of Meick and Company and following a six months training period at Rahway, N. J., we will be located at Danville, Penna. Our daughter, Sarah, seems to be surviving nicely, in spite of our experimenting. You can count on having her at W.C. in 1968!"

Ruth (Schohn) Pilling writes from North Wilmington, Mass.: "Russ and I have been in our new home way out in the wilds of Massachusetts almost a year now, and with one winter behind us in which we explored the ins and outs of interior decorating, we are now facing a new adventure in gardening."

Billie (Upchurch) Miller, who lives in Asheboro, writes: "Life is full and interesting with two babies to care for and church work, Junior Woman's Club activities, etc. Special greetings to all '44'ers and I look forward to our 10th reunion in 1954!"

Mary Alice (Vann) Fox's address is c/o Lt. (j.g.) Samuel M. Fox, III, M.C., U.S.N., U.S.N. #100, Fleet Post Office, New York, N. Y. "After finishing my two years residency in pediatrics at the Children's Hospital of Philadelphia on June 30, I will sail for London, England. Sam is stationed there with the U. S. Navy Dispensary in Grosvenor Square. We expect to be in England for about two years. I hope I'll have some sort of work, such as pediatric consultant to the Dependent Service; but if such is not available, I'm sure I will find it quite interesting to observe British pediatrics and to take in all the other interests of Great Britain and Europe. Our door, of course, is open to any of our friends from W.C. who might be in London in the next two years."

Suzanne (Walker) Glenn's address is Mrs. Charles A. Glenn, Apartado Aereo 898, Barranquilla Colombia, South America. Mr. Glenn is with American Foreign Insurance. They were married in Panama, Canal Zone, April 12, 1951.

Clara (Weismann) Mason writes from South Orange, N. J., that they are eagerly looking forward to moving into their new home in the Fall. Jeannette (Winstead) Morgan and her husband have moved into their new home in Richmond, Va. Mr. Morgan is a research chemist at Virginia-Carolina Chemical Corporation and Jeannette is keeping house.

Born to Rev. and Mrs. Joseph A. McGehee (Coline Thies), a daughter, Blanch Claire, May 27, 1951, Fordyce, Ark. Her grandmother is Coline (Austin) Theis.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth A. Shinn, Jr. (Carolyn Scarborough), a daughter, Lucy Carolyn, March 5, 1951, Greenville, S. C.

Mamie E. Addington has been appointed technical research librarian at Monsanto Chemical Company's Nitro, West Virginia, plant. She has been employed for the past six years in analytical chemistry work for E. I. duPont de Nemours & Company, at Belle, W. Va.

Mary Wilmoth (Barber) Boyette and her husband will move to Atlanta, Ga., this Fall, where Dr. Boyette will practice dentistry. "I am looking forward to becoming a member of the Atlanta Alumnae Chapter. It seems they have an extremely active group." The Boyettes are living in Raleigh this summer.

Margaret Ann Brown writes that she enjoys the alumnae meetings in Miami, Fla. "The alumnae here seems to be well pleased with our get-togethers for regular 'jam sessions' and catch up on the latest happenings, both at school and locally."

Violet (Caneega) Webb recently wrote from East Hampton, Long Island, N. Y.: "I have no idea where the time has gone since I was married in September 1950, but I know that 24 sixth graders, a husband and a tiny cottage have kept me busy. My husband and I visited my parents in Greensboro during April and we marvelled at the many new improvements taking place on the Woman's College campus. I hope to finish my master's degree this summer at Woman's College."

Beatrice Farmer is employed by Meyer's Department Store in Greensboro, where she is head of assortment planning on the general merchandising staff. "I work between the president, general merchandiser and the buyers on their seasonal pricing and basic stocks. It can be fascinating to those who like detail work. Dot Beatty '45 and I have an apartment together. She and I belong to the Beta Nu Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi. Incidentally, I have been elected vice-president for the coming year, and also vice-president of the Greensboro Beta Sigma Phi City Council. I am also active in the National Secretaries Association. I have enjoyed attending night classes at Woman's College. The campus doesn't look the same, but the spirit at W. C. will always be the same!"

Julia (Hill) Gunn lives in Selma, where her husband teaches vocational agriculture at the Selma High School. "My father was in the hospital at Oak Ridge, Tenn., for several months and has just returned home. With such good news, I feel as if we're headed for a swell summer."

The engagement of Margaret M. Potts of Upper Montclair, N. J., to Mr. Elmer H. Purchase, of East Orange, N. J., was recently announced by her parents, Dr. and Mrs. P. C. Potts. Margaret teaches a Braille and sight saving class in the Newark Public Schools and Mr. Purchase is a division manager of the Elizabeth Store of Sears Roebuck & Company. Plans are being made for a Fall wedding.

Rebecca West will be married on August 25, 1951, to Mr. Gerald Edge Hook, of Elon College. The wedding will take place at Dover.

Lu Ellen (Routh) Hooper's husband was graduated from Wake Forest Law School in January 1951, and is now practicing in Edenton. "We're enjoying living here so much. Everyone has been so cordial and I've met several W. C. Alumnae and have one for a neighbor!"

Mary C. (Satterfield) Taylor is living in Fieldale, Va. "We moved into our home last November and we are enjoying our spacious seven acres of land. I retired from my job at Du Pont in March and it is real nice just to have one job."

Ella Gray Wilson teaches physical education at Furman University, Greenville, S. C. "I attended the convention of the Southern Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation, held in Richmond, Va., this year and saw many W. C. alumnae. I enjoyed seeing Doris Glisson '46, who now lives in Richmond. A friend and I had a nice trip to Havana and Nassau last summer. We drove to Miami and went by plane from there. We were on a five-day tour and were kept busy seeing all the interesting sights. Havana was buzzing with gay entertainment, Spanish, noise and car horns and had an abundance of beautiful scenery, buildings and sunshine. Nassau was much quieter and was taking life very easy. Nassau is a beautiful resort island and has a very friendly atmosphere. We were quite amused by some of the English customs, such as driving on the left side of the street and seeing signs that read, 'Keep left.' Visiting the beautiful Paradise Beach on Hog Island was another highlight of the trip. We really didn't go very far on our trip, but at least went out of the U.S. and experienced going through customs and being in a land of different language. After returning to Miami, we spent a couple of days at Miami Beach. It was a wonderful trip and I am looking forward to a trip with Marilyn Vincent '47 to California this summer."

Mary K. (Allen) Monroe's address is Mrs. Wm. G. Monroe, The Texas Company (Overseas) Ltd., 7A. Avenida Sur, Numero 111, Apartado Postal No. 336, Guatemala, C.A.

Haldane (Bean) Ball's husband is a chemist at Hans Ree's Company in Asheville. "We have charge of the Intermediate Youth Fellowship group at Central Methodist Church and that keeps us busy but we have fun doing it."

Emily (Bower) Onak has a new job with Stanolind Oil and Gas Company in Houston, Texas.

Ruth (Causby) Dameron and her husband are living in Columbia, S. C. Lieutenant Dameron is stationed at Ft. Jackson, S. C., with the U.S. Army.

Ruth (Cooke) Thomassen and her family live in Cedar Grove, N. J. They have a daughter, Kathy 1.

Betty (Dixon) Paschal's address is 5632 Stoneyway Trail, Nashville, Tenn. "We have been living here since last October and are very delighted with it, but the mountains make it a mighty long journey back to Winston-Salem. I left my newspaper work and am now only a leisurely housewife."

Nelda Griffin's address is Southbrook Courts, 3426 16th Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

Louise (Highsmith) Wilkerson's husband is a senior at the Medical College of Virginia, and they are living at 2708 Hillcrest Road, Richmond. Louise teaches music in the Richmond Public Schools. She is also serving as president of the Richmond Chapter of the Woman's College Alumnae Chapter.

Frances Hinton (Kittrell) Fritchman's new address is 1009 Poplar Blvd., Jackson, Miss. "Jackson is a nice place in which to live, but John and I miss Atlanta a great deal. Ruth (Daniel) Roberts '46, her husband and daughter paid me a short visit en route to Texas. We had quite a chat about college days and college friends."

Alice (Klaber) Wolff, class of '46, writes: "We are entranced with Denver, Colo., and we are enjoying our home and the new friends we have made. Donna 5½ is eagerly anticipating the start of school in September and Connie is a radiant 1 year older. My husband, in addition to keeping a full-time job, is going to night school. Thus, life is very full and active."

Jane (Linville) Joyner and her husband, who is studying medicine in Boston, Mass., are spending the summer with their parents in Kernersville.

Betty Moore served on the staff at the University of Virginia Hospital, Charlottesville, Va., last year. "The University is as beautiful as it is reputed to be and I find my teaching and duties as private ward dietitian very interesting. I recently attended the beautiful wedding of my college roommate, Elizabeth Crumpler '46. Her husband is Dr. Erick Bell of Wilson, and they reside in Biloxi, Miss., where he is serving in the Air Corps at Keesler Field. I am looking forward to seeing many '46'ers at the reunion in May. After having been on the dietary staff at Woman's College for three years, I find that I can never turn down an opportunity to return."

Jane (Severance) Fry writes from Signal Mountain, Tenn.: "The big news in our life is our son, born September 20, 1950. Despite his allergy to milk, of all things, he is growing in all directions and getting along fine. We met lively little Kenna McClure, daughter of Frances (McClure) Peters '47 during Christmas. Though they both had the same birth date in common, the off-spring ignored each other entirely while their mamas had a gay time talking formulas, diets, etc."

Jo (Singletary) Barbre is assistant librarian at Queen's College, Charlotte.

Jean (Stockton) Piner and her husband are living in Chapel Hill, where

Mr. Piner is attending the University of North Carolina. "Our family now consists of a seven-months-old red-headed daughter, Molly, and a Siamese cat, Suki. A day with Molly makes me even happier that I majored in physical education. Some of her acrobatics convince me that she's destined to make use of the new gym at W.C."

Eleanor (White) Willett, who lives in Portsmouth, Va., writes: "We now have a son, Tom, who will be one in August. Our daughter, Nancy, will soon be three and is interested in everything and everyone. I am looking forward to our Class Reunion and to seeing my mother, Mrs. J. A. White, Sr., receive her master's degree in education."

Class of '46 Reunion Luncheon

Our luncheon was held on May 26 in South Dining Hall. It was cafeteria style and we were served a delicious lunch, topped with that all time favorite, strawberry shortcake for dessert. There were attractive placards, and on each table there was a centerpiece of American Beauty roses.

Thirty-two attended the luncheon. Miss Ethel Martus, our class chairman, was present. We enjoyed talking with her very much. We were sorry that our class president, Betty Jane (Sarratt) Cowan, could not be with us. She has had a new addition to her family recently, and felt that she could not be away from her newly arrived son. We are very happy for her and certainly did miss her.

Fifteen of us were local gals from Greensboro. Most of us were from within the state, but we had a few out of states present. We had fun exchanging views concerning climates, gardens, flowers and the like.

Our main topic of discussion was of course babies and most everyone was carrying snapshots of their children. Girls, one of our classmates even has 4 children. Think of that! We would have a hard time catching up with her.

Most of us met our new Chancellor, Dr. E. K. Graham. We found him most attractive and very enlightening. We spent the remainder of our time discussing the new changes that have taken place on campus. We just about all came to the conclusion that we would hardly know our way around, what with so many new and beautiful buildings. The new library cannot be equalled, so if any of you girls are ever passing through, it is a must-see on your list.

Wish that each and everyone of you could have been present. It was great fun seeing each other again, and I am sure that a good time was had by all.

Girls, I am very sorry that I am unable to disclose the names of those who attended the luncheons, as I am 350 miles away from home spending the summer with my husband. My list of names is in Greensboro, and I am afraid that my mother would not know where to start searching for it. So, will you please forgive my neglect in doing so?

Diana (Doggett) Porter,
Chairman of Reunion Luncheon.

Nancy Howell has been working with the North Carolina State Highway Department since January 1950.

Jean (Keiger) Gregg writes that she is living in Asbury Park, N. J. "My husband was called back to active duty with the Army and is now stationed at Ft. Monmouth, N. J. If any alumnae are living here or in neighboring towns, I would be glad to know about it." Jean's address is: Care of Lt. E. B. Gregg, 0946105, Section 415, Student Officers Detach., The Signal School, Ft. Monmouth, N. J.

Gertrude Ledden is secretary at Needham Broughton High School in Raleigh. "I plan a vacation in July to New York City and San Antonio, Texas."

Jane (Moon) Linsky writes: "We are now the proud parents of a daughter, Jan Louise, born September 23, 1950, in Peoria, Ill. Jan sports gobs of black hair and has big blue eyes. She is a perfect example of perpetual motion and there's never a dull moment. In April we moved to Flint, Michigan, where Chuck is teaching engineering at General Motors Institute. Our new address is, 1602 Chevrolet Avenue. Chuck came to Flint ahead of me as I took the baby and went to North Carolina to visit my family. Had a chance to be in Greensboro and could scarcely believe my eyes when I saw all those wonderful new buildings. Saw Marie (Moore) Mooney '47 while home and had a grand time getting caught up on everyone's activities."

June Osborne teaches in the High Point City Schools. "I have enjoyed seeing the new buildings at W.C. Jessie Wooten '47 also teaches here and I see her quite often."

Dorothy (Pugh) Benton works with the North Carolina Industrial Commission in Raleigh.

Jane Terry writes from Newtonville, Mass.: "I have had a very rich and full year as director of nursery education at the Second Congregational Church here. The church operates a weekday nursery school as well as extensive church school on Sunday mornings for children 2½ to 4½. Last May I received the degree of master of religious education from Andover Newton Theological School. It was a thrill to be back in North Carolina visiting classmates last August, and I enjoyed so much seeing the Woman's College campus."

Alice Tilson writes from Asheville: "I resigned from the Mental Hygiene Clinic on June 12 and plan to go to Washington, D. C., on June 23 for a year of school."

Ruth (Watkins) Harmon is receptionist in the Board of Education in the Charlotte City Schools. "It's very interesting work and I enjoy it even more, having been a teacher once myself."

Mary Ann (White) Murphy's husband, Major Charles L. Murphy, is stationed at Carswell A.F.B., Fort Worth, Texas. "We have a little boy, Lee Anderson, who was born November 2, 1950."

Lucy Wolf received the master's degree in sacred music in May from Union Theological Seminary, New York City. She did field work while at Union as organist and choir director, Union Evangelical Church, Corona, N. Y. The graduation ceremonies were held at The Riverside Church in New York.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. M. Earl Arnold (Margaret E. Clark), a daughter, Pamela Eleanor, April 9, 1951, Lynbrook, N. Y.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Gist, Jr. (Isabel Howard) a son, Nathaniel III, April 1951, Columbia, S. C.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Stone, Jr. (Helen McNaull), a son, William Haywood III, January 27, 1951, Greensboro.

Marie (Blue) Shelton is working in the Application Division of the Mecklenburg County Department of Public Welfare, Charlotte. "Tiff, our 13-months-old son, is quite a man! He was walking alone at 8 months and is climbing now. I belong to a three-table bridge club and almost half of us are W.C. alumnae. College talk is quite the thing, but we do play bridge!"

Betsy Ann (Bulluck) Strandberg's husband graduated from the University of North Carolina in June and they planned to return to Rocky Mount.

Susan Bumpass was graduated from the Johns Hopkins School of Nursing in May and received a bachelor of science degree in nursing there in June. "After a vacation in July, I plan to accept an appointment as a general staff nurse in the Surgical Clinic here at Hopkins, where I hope to work on the pediatric floor."

Page Coleman writes from New York: "During March, Ann Barnett '48 and her fiance spent the weekend with me when they made a trip to New York to see the fabulous Broadway show, "South Pacific." Since Ann was the first W.C.'er I had seen in ages, I really had a chance to get caught up on all the news."

Carolina (Flack) Baynard lives in Forest City. "Housekeeping for a husband and a 17-months-old daughter takes a lot of time. However, Paul and I do find time for community activities and at the present I'm pretty busy as president of the Junior Woman's Club of Forest City."

Jean (Planagan) Bynum's husband was recalled to active duty in March and he is now stationed at Fort Bragg, where they are at home.

Mary Giles completed work for her master of science degree in business education at the Woman's College in May. The degree will be conferred in May 1952. She is now teaching at National Business College, Roanoke, Va.

Blanche Hicks writes from Washington, D. C.: "Nancy Jeffrey '48 teaches nursery school and kindergarten at Nob Hill School, Alexandria, Va. She is taking a course in public speaking at George Washington University and since I live across the street from the University, I see her quite often."

Mary Black McBryde lives in Greensboro. "Grace (Quinn) Carlton '48 attended graduation at Woman's College, and her sister, Faye Quinn, was one of the graduates. Christine (Hendricks) Woodruff '48 came over Saturday of commencement and we had a grand get-together."

Elizabeth McKinney and her sister, Geraldine McKinney, have been living in Santa Fe, New Mexico, for more than a year. Elizabeth writes: "We still love it as much as we did when we first came. Gerry is secretary to the assistant director of the Department of Public Welfare. I have been teaching dramatics, cooking, and coaching sports for children at a club house where the children come after school for recreation, and they come all day during the summer. Our main interest after working hours lies in the theater. We are both members of the Corelli Players—Gerry in the capacity of stage manager while I have been fortunate enough to be able to act. This past summer I have played Wilson in the 'Barretts of Wimpole Street', Mother in 'Life With Father', and Mrs. Orcutt in 'Stage Door'. If anyone has the opportunity to come to Santa Fe, please look us up, for we would love to show you around."

Louise Martin arrived in Tokyo Japan, June 31, for an overseas assignment with the American Red Cross in the Far Eastern theater. She will serve as a hospital staff aide in the Red Cross services in military hospitals program. Prior to accepting this position with the Red Cross, she was an assistant buyer in a Richmond, Va., department store.

Meade (Moore) Lamb and her husband have moved from Conway, S. C., to Greensboro, where Mr. Lamb is working with radio station WCOG. Meade is doing secretarial work for Starr Davis Company, Inc.

Lt. Elizabeth M. Osborne is now located at Fitzsimons Army Hospital, Denver, Colo., where she is beginning the second phase of her physical therapy training, which consists of 22 weeks of clinical practice at Fitzsimons. "This has been my first glimpse of Colorado and the mountains are quite breath-taking. They are still snow capped and really lovely. On a clear day we can see Pikes Peak from the hospital."

Joyce Posson wrote in May from Madison, Wisconsin: "I am working as a copy-writer for CUNA Mutual Insurance Society, which serves credit unions all over the country. This is a very worthwhile movement and I've not only learned about advertising, but have met all sorts of people. I'm really caught half-way between two worlds, since I'm living in a peculiar old house in the University of Wisconsin area and still feel studentish. I may start work on Ph.D. next year, or run back to the Swiss Alps again!"

Elaine (Solomon) Zerden's address is 426 5th Street, N.W., Hickory.

Margaret McBride received her master's degree in zoology from the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, in June. She was an assistant in Biology Department at Woman's College last year. "I'm planning a motor trip to Canada this summer with Rosemary Herman '48, Jo Stewart '42 and friends from Chapel Hill. I will also be assisting in research in genetics at the University this summer. Next year I plan to teach in the Biology Department at Catawba College in Salisbury."

Kissell Suggs writes that she plans to teach in Gastonia next Fall. "I see Mary Patrick '48 and Tiff Cunningham '48 very often, as they live here in Gastonia. Alice (Suggs) Pollock, class of '52, is living in Jacksonville. Her husband, Lt. E. A. Pollock, Jr., is stationed at Camp Lejeune."

Gaillard (Tennent) Whitehurst and her husband are attending the summer session at Woman's College. Mr. Whitehurst is working on his master's degree in education and they are serving as host and hostess for married couples and young men in Kirkland Hall. They make their home in Biltmore, where Gaillard works part-time with the Gordon Lumber Company of Asheville.

Barbara Jane White is a secretary in the Public Relations Department at the Du Pont Plant, Wilmington, Del.

SOUTH SPENCER HALL

in the New Year, Kevin was named "The King of Rockbridge County, Virginia." Mr. Stewart was recently graduated from Washington and Lee Law School.

Gertrude Bender writes from 1112 18th Street, Santa Monica, Calif.: "I am most pleased with my work at the University of California at Los Angeles School of Medicine. Our recently set-up lab is now functioning smoothly and we are conducting a study on a very interesting renal problem. California is wonderful. Though I have met several people from North Carolina, I have seen no W. C. alumnae."

Betty Jane (Bradford) Regan recently spent some time in New York City. "Anelia Shannon '49 stayed with me in New York in January until my husband came up later during my trip. We spend endless hours talking and running into people from W.C."

Sophia Ann (Campbell) Rhyne's husband is in school in Angola, Indiana. "We are looking forward to returning to Greensboro soon after the first of the year."

Lucia Collarte lives at 801 Riverside Dr., New York 32, N. Y. "I am now working for Radio Free Europe. It is a wonderful organization, devoted to fighting Communism. We do our broadcasting from Munich, Germany. Our big, new transmitter was set up May 1 and is beaming our way of life towards Czechoslovakia. Already the Czech-Communist government has protested to the State Government, so we know we are being felt. We are unlike 'The Voice of America', in that we are private and not government controlled. Lately, I have made a few trips to the Tar Heel State and I have seen Doris Banks '49 in Raleigh and Barbara (Edinger) Taylor '49 in Greensboro. Barbara and her husband have a lovely new house out on the Groometown Road and an active little son, Scot Thomas."

Carolyn (Culpepper) Boykin lives in Tarboro. "I was married September 23, 1950, to James M. Boykin. He attended the University of North Carolina and served in the U. S. Army, and is now working with the Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company here."

Eleanor Dillard writes that she and Nancy Ford '49 are still with the Appalachian Electric Power Company, Grundy, Va. "There will be another

W. C. girl, Kathryn Dobbins '51, in our division this summer."

Nancy Beam (Funderburk) Wells writes: "I was in New York City in March with Katherine Sherrill '26, and saw Betty Crawford '50, Marie and Marilyn Shaw '50." Nancy Beam and her husband have moved from Galax, Va., back to Burlington.

Martha Jane (Garris) Atkinson teaches chemistry and world history in the Harrisburg School. She is also school librarian. They live in Concord.

Anne Gaw is a teller at the Farmers National Bank in Annapolis, Md. "For a year and a half I have been a member of the Tau Omicron Phi Sorority, a charitable organization, and this Spring I was elected as president. At the Naval Academy Ring Dance in May, I became engaged to Midshipman Hugo Schluter, from Brooklyn, N. Y."

Frances Belle Glenn is living at her home in Raleigh and is working with the Construction Department of the State Highway and Public Works Commission.

Peggy (Goodman) Rothschild and her husband are living in Memphis, Tenn. "After a wonderful year in Boston, Mass., Joe and I are back in Memphis, where he will finish his senior residency. He has an appointment at the University of Tennessee Pediatric Department and we are so happy to be back home."

Nancy Porter
Vassar College
Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Oliver James Beaman (Peggy Gililkin, com. '50), a son, Oliver James, Jr., May 17, 1951, Greensboro.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. George W. Solberg (Betty Jane Mitchell), a son, Robert Mitchell, April 26, 1951, Miami, Fla.

Alyce A. Bruin will complete her work at Bon Air Industrial School in September, at which time she plans to enter the Catholic University in Washington, D. C., where she will study psychiatric social work.

June S. Carter is working for the Johns Hopkins Applied Physics Laboratory in Silver Spring, Md.

Betty Crawford writes from Frederick Md.: "Spring vacation saw me taking ten Hood students to Bermuda. The role of chaperone is still a strange one for me to fill, but it certainly was fun. Patsy Jordan '50 was staying at the same place we were. She was one of the chaperones with the Centenary Junior College group. Caroline (Allen) Roberts '50 and Jay were there on their honeymoon, too. All of which proves that W. C. girls cover the earth!"

Sara Lou Debnam writes: "I'm still in Washington, D. C., with the Department of Defense, and having a grand time. The best part of it all is that this Nation's Capital seems to be the hub of all the travel of many of the Class of 1950, and it's wonderful to see some of them when they are passing through. Not too long ago, Lee Mahan '50 came down from Syracuse, N. Y., where she is in graduate school and spent the week-end with Eleanor Rigney '50 and Peggy Jeffries '50, in Arlington, Va. Lee and Oriana (MacArthur) McKinnon '50 hit town the same day, so we were all out for their arrival! Betty Crawford '50 came down on Saturday from Hood College in Frederick, Md., where she is working, and we all really had a glorious time. Alice Boehret '50 is to come down this week-end from Philadelphia. Nancy Porter '50 stopped over for the night last January on her way back to Vassar after a trip to Greensboro. I'm eagerly looking forward to our Class Reunion."

Ens. Rebecca A. Lloyd, U.S.N., is attached to the Registered Publica-

Reunion Class of 1950

The Class of 1950 held their first reunion Saturday, May 26, Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Jackson and Miss Bernice Draper were guests at the luncheon in South Dining Hall, where approximately 75 graduates met. Immediately following lunch we adjourned to South Spencer parlor where Miss Ellen Griffin showed the movies of May Day, Class Day, and Commencement of 1950. The singing of the Class Song and The College Song brought the reunion proper to an end, but all enjoyed seeing old friends during the Alumnae festivities of the weekend.

Nancy Porter, Everlasting President.

tions Issuing Office at New York Naval Shipyard as Assistant Issuing Officer. "The RPIO is the Navy's library, and our job is to see that the forces afloat and ashore in the 3rd Naval District receive books that they are qualified to have. Keeping everything up-to-date is quite a job, as unlike civilian books, our pubs have changes and corrections constantly coming in. I have been up to Westport, Conn., several times where I visited my freshman roommate, Barbara Moomau's parents. While there, I also visited with Doris (Mills) Fable '44 and Jean (Moomau) Boyd '44. Patsy Jordan '50 came over in February to have dinner with me and to go to see 'South Pacific.'"

Lee Mahan is spending the summer in Monte Ne, Arkansas, where she is program director and executive counselor at Camp Joyzelle. "My heart panged at not being able to attend commencement and our first reunion, but my responsibilities held me in Syracuse, seeing some of my own girls graduate and housing guests for the proud occasion."

Helen (Mamber) Levin is doing fashion advertising for Brownhills in Greensboro.

Nancy Montgomery writes that she likes her job of teaching physical education at Sophie Newcomb College in New Orleans, La. "Betsy Siler '49 is here also, doing graduate work. Enjoyed my visit back to W. C. in March."

Barbara Moomau, who is recreation director at the Y.W.C.A. in High Point, and Nancy Campbell '49, who is with the Girl Scouts there, are in charge of a summer day camp. "We hope that it will be a success this year because we are trying some new things. At this point, we are wondering if it pays to let two W.C. graduates work together!"

Peggy (Renegar) Allgood's husband is assistant county agent in Carteret County and she is a case work assistant in the Welfare Department there. They are living at 108 Pollock Street, Beaufort. Peggy taught for the first half of last year in Bryson City.

Ann Royster writes that she has enjoyed her year of teaching music in Williamston and she plans to go back there next Fall. "I have been back to W.C. several times this year and am looking forward to our class reunion."

Marilyn and Marie Shaw write from New York City: "The Shaws apartment has been a gathering spot for those from near and far. Betty Crawford '50, Dolly Davis '50, Margaret Moynahan '50, Betsy Newman '50, Kitty Quick '50, Sally (Wingfield) Hughes '49, and Ellen (Metz) von Nardroff '50, are among those who can bear witness that all is well with the working girls. If people at W.C. had trouble remembering which Shaw was which, you can well imagine how confusing it is to find both of our names under one mail box!"

Nancy Porter is teaching swimming during the summer session at Woman's College.

Peggy Bess Tucker, com. '50, is a stenographer at the mail order plant of Sears, Roebuck & Company, Greensboro.

Jean Elizabeth Williams attended summer school at Wake Forest College this summer.

We Extend Deepest Sympathy:

To Iola (Hilliard) Siceloff, class of '01, in the death of her husband, Mr. Charles E. Siceloff, April, 1951, High Point. Mr. Siceloff was the brother of Bess Siceloff '21.

To Evelyn (Gudger) Roberts '09, in the death of her husband, Mr. Guy V. Roberts, March 29, 1951, in an Asheville hospital. Mr. Roberts was a prominent attorney and political leader in North Carolina. He served four years as a member of the State Highway Commission and during that time he was instrumental in the routing of the highway between Marshall and Asheville.

To Margaret (Cotton) Vinson, com. '12, in the death of her mother, Mrs. Ila H. Cotton, June, 1951, Fayetteville.

To Ruth (Tate) Anderson '16, and Ruth Tate Anderson, class of '47, in the death of their husband and father, Mr. William Lee Anderson, April 30, 1951, Winston-Salem.

To Esther (Clapp) Jones '18, and Helen (Clapp) Jackson '27, in the death of their mother, Mrs. Lula Anderson Clapp, June, 1951, Greensboro.

To Hazelene (Tate) Scott, com. '23, in the death of her mother, Mrs. Sallie Webster Tate, April 30, 1951, Mebane.

To Ruth (Wilkins) Sikes '24 in the sudden death of her 18-year-old son, Olin B. Sikes, Jr., June 26, 1951, Monroe.

To Julia (Phillips) Mitchell '25, in the death of her husband, Dr. G. T. Mitchell, June 21, 1951, at his home in Wilkesboro. Dr. Mitchell attended Mars Hill College and was graduated from the University of North Carolina pre-medical school. He received his M.D. degree from Jefferson Medical College in Philadelphia, and began practice in the Jennings and Union Grove communities of North Iredell and Southeast Wilkes. Dr. Mitchell was a past president of the Wilkes-Alleghany Medical Society and a member of the North Carolina Medical Society, taking an active part in the affairs of the organizations. He was a leader in the Wilkesboro Baptist Church.

To Mary Alice (Robertson) Terrell '26, in the death of her husband, Mr. Frederick W. Terrell, May 12, 1951, Rex Hospital, Raleigh, following a cerebral hemorrhage. A graduate of Trinity College, now Duke University, Mr. Terrell taught school and served as principal in North Carolina schools for a number of years. At the time of his death he was North Carolina representative for a school book publishing firm in Atlanta, Ga. In a tribute to Mr. Terrell, written by Mr. Tom Bost of Raleigh and which appeared in the Greensboro Daily News, he said: "Fred Terrell did his living artistically, self-unconsciously and uttered no tedious homilies on this art of living. He taught school for a season, but he did not teach goodness. It isn't taught; it is caught. This contagion must live long after him."

To Madonna (Grantham) McKay, com. '18, Katherine (Grantham) Rogers '26, and Edna (Grantham) Seabury '30, in the death of their father, Mr. Murray F. Grantham, September 7, 1950, Greensboro. Mr. Grantham was killed by a bus in front of his home. He was an alumnus of Guilford College.
